WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN made many speeches worth hearing, and the world applauded.

What would the world give if he could come back and make another speech of thirty seconds on "What I saw, what I felt, what I knew, where I went, the minute after I died?"

THE REV. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, preaching in his Park Avenue Church in New York, calls agnosticism a great help of the world. "It is," he says, "a great spiritual philosophy, which has done more for human beings than any other belief."

MANY WILL DENY that, but this is certain: Agnosticism is the belief of those that say, "I do not know." And the man who realises that he does not know is often on the road to know something. But that does not apply in religion. There, no one KNOWS anything; it is all faith.

The Rev. Mr. Holmes added: "My blood runs cold to think what Mr. Bryan would do if he had the power."

THAT WAS SAID before Mr. Bryan had died, and it was too strong a statement. Mr. Bryan would never have done anything more cruel than to make others believe as he believed if he could, AND HE COULDN'T. He would have made his religious belief part of the Constitution, if he could. But he could not have done that, either.

THE BRITISH government, to fight depression in British trade, will undertake international world advertising on a gigantic scale. This proves again, what everybody knows, that Great Britain has statesmen working for her.

Five billion dollars will be appropriated at first to boom colonial goods. The idea of the British Empire, solid and sound as a steel bullet, is that QUALITY, PLUS ADVERTISING, can overcome any trade depression.

THE MARRIAGE of a young girl in the Vanderbilt family has caused newspaper discussion.

A Protestant bishop performed the ceremony, although the mother is a Catholic and her daughters were brought up in the Catholic faith.

All that is the business of the family and of those immediately concerned.

But in one statement made by the family you observe the ancient wisdom of the Catholic Church.

WHEN young Mr. Vanderbilt, a Protestant, married Miss Fair, a Catholic, it was stipulated on the mother's behalf that all daughters born of the union should be brought up in the Catholic Church.

There is wisdom. Daughters become mothers, influence the children and the men about them, and form the next generation.

The mothers are the strength of every church and every religion. In the Bible they were the last at the Cross and the first at the Tomb.

The church that has the mothers on its side is the church that will survive, for mothers create and guide the children and influence the men.

BRYAN DEFENDS BIBLE IN DEATH

U. S. SOCIETY WOMAN BECOMES BRIDE OF ENGLISH WAR HERO

Montreal, July 28.—Mrs. Guinevere Sinclair Gould, once a girl of the footlights, since 1923 the widow of George J. Gould and heiress to much of the huge Gould fortune, became Viscountess Dunsford today, wife of a British war hero.

In decidedly quiet fashion the beautiful widow and the son and heir of the Earl of Middleton were married by the Rev. Dr. Hanson of the American Presbyterian Church.

And when the ceremony had been completed the thirty-one-year-old bride, mother of three children, had risen from the daughter of a British army officer ranching in North Dakota, up into the world of the theatre, then into Yankee society and millions to a title and the start of the road that some day may make her Marchioness of Middleton.

Viscount Dunsford, an Oxford man, thrice decorated for valor on the Western Front with the British forces, is six years the senior of his

FIND MAN AND 2 BOYS DEAD IN HOTEL ROOM

New Haven, Ct., July 28 (A.P.).—Two boys and a man were found dead in a room at the Flanagan Hotel here today, after a door had been broken down to gain entrance to the room which they had occupied since Sunday. They were last seen last night when the man went to a nearby store to buy some food.

The man registered as Mike Sesnieupa, of Providence, R. I. The boys were about seven and twelve years old respectively. They were found lying on the bed, fully clothed. The man was lying on the floor with his coat off, in a doubled up condition as if he had suffered convulsions.

Three glasses which had contained ginger ale were found in the room. Coroner Eli Mix and Medical Examiner Kowalewski began an investigation. The latter is performing an autopsy.

Early last night the man was seen leaving the hotel and returning shortly afterwards with ginger ale and ham and bread for sandwiches. When the maid attempted to rouse them this morning, no one answered her knocks on the door. Charles Gibbons, the clerk, was informed and he had the door broken in. The three were then found dead. The man was about forty years old.

35 GASSED IN MINE STRIKE IN W. VIRGINIA

Washington, July 28 (A.P.).—Charges that thirty-five persons had been gassed by mine guards at mine No. 9 of the Jamison Coal & Coke Company near Farmington, W. Va., were received today by the conciliation bureau of the Labor Department from J. L. Studdard, international representative of the United Mine Workers of America.

The question was referred by Acting Secretary White to Governor Gore of West Virginia.

Studdard said the incident occurred on the picket line at 8 o'clock yesterday morning, and that Mrs. Judy Brinto was reported by physicians as being in a serious condition as a result.

The Labor Department explained that the mine is in the northern West Virginia strike area, where miners have been out for more than three months.

HUB FISHING BOAT ON ROCKS WITH 8 IN CREW

The fishing vessel Alden, a Boston halibut dragger, was ashore in a blanket of fog near North Truro today, with the Coast Guard cutter Acushnet standing by to pull her off if possible at high tide.

The captain and crew, all Boston fishermen, faced loss of their heavy cargo of halibut with which they were homeward bound from the Banks when they grounded. In order to lighten the vessel, it was

WOMAN ROUTS 'WILD MAN' SLAYER SUSPECT

Hudson, N. H., July 28.—The populace of Hudson, already aroused by the brutal slaying of the Gillis sisters, was thrown into new frenzy today when a bedraggled, unkempt stranger emerged from the woods and insulted Mrs. Turner Rose of Ferry street.

Up roads, through woods and to the underbrush at Tarnie Pond the man was chased by two neighbors armed with revolvers.

He vanished in the thickets near the ice houses, and a new posse, this one of vigilante farmers, was organized to hunt him down, in the firm belief that he is the Gillis slayer.

The stranger was the same man seen in the woods three days ago by a farmer and is believed to be the assailant of Robert Beard, struck down with a club in the woods while freeing a dog that had been tied up three days in a tree.

FLEES INTO WOODS.

Mrs. Rose was in her kitchen today when the stranger, who has piercing eyes, stepped out of the woods and asked if he could use her telephone.

The woman declared the phone to be out of order, whereupon the

CALLS CHRISTIANS "TO ARMS" IN FINAL ATTACK ON EVOLUTION

Dayton, July 28.—Even in death the voice of William Jennings Bryan spoke out today against the "bloody, brutal" doctrine of evolution, as sponsored by his legal opponent, Clarence Darrow, and in impassioned defence of the principles of Christian faith for which he laid down his life.

The Commoner's last words were spoken through the medium of the speech he was to have delivered in summing up the side of religion in the Scopes trial, in his defence of the Tennessee anti-evolution law. He had spent days preparing this speech; he had intended it should rival in eloquence the beauty that other speech of "The Crown of Thorns and Cross of Gold," on which he, a young lawyer, had climbed from political obscurity to lofty political heights three decades ago.

It was a disappointment to Bryan that he was denied the opportunity of delivering this oration before the jury of farmer-folk in the Rhea County courthouse.

Mrs. Bryan decided it should go before the country while the body of the Commoner lay in simple state on the Rogers' lawn, viewed by the "plain people" for whom the speech was intended.

GIRL DYING IN FATAL CRASH

Death may come, physicians at Mary Lane Hospital, Ware, feared today, to the second member of the party of three whose automobile crashed into a telegraph pole at West Brookfield, killing J. Alfred Pepper, young Boston wool merchant, and seriously injuring John Morrill, a friend.

Miss Mary Dunphy, who was on route to Hartford with the two men, is in a critical condition with a possible fracture of the skull, fractured jawbone and serious internal injuries.

A short time before the accident the party left the home of Pepper's mother, Mrs. A. Elizabeth Maynard Pepper, No. 142 Beacon street, Back Bay, where they were entertained at dinner. It is thought Pepper, who was driving, became confused as to

FOUND CLUB BUILDING WAS IN BAD CONDITION

Six weeks before the Pickwick Club collapse, Charles A. Kendall, a structural engineer, reported to Building Inspector J. J. Hendrick that he considered the club building in a dangerous condition and in need of immediate inspection.

Kendall so testified today at the trial of Hendrick and the other men charged with responsibility for the disaster and the loss of forty-four lives.

On April 23 or 24, when continued, Hendrick, in his company, did inspect the Pickwick Club.

Witness said that before that he had looked over the building and been frightened. He said he, Harry M. Haven, the architect, and John A. Pulte, contractor, the last named co-defendants with Hendrick, were virtually agreed a certain party wall constituted a menace.

SCARED WHILE UP ON ROOF.

He said that he himself had walked out on the roof, after the April 13 fire, to find that it sagged so alarmingly that he hurried off, for his own safety.

Kendall said he told Inspector Hendrick all his fears, and that the latter, afterlooking the building over, said "it was perfectly all right."

Later, said the engineer, he reported to Harry Haven, the architect, and his employer, what Inspector Hendrick had said.

Kendall was preceded on the stand by Thomas A. Elston, building wrecker, who went back for cross examination.

Attorney Francis P. Garland began the cross-examination of Elston as soon as the session began. Garland is counsel for Harry M. Haven, architect.

Q.—Did you examine the wall of the Pickwick Club since adjournment yesterday? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many times did you go into the Pickwick Club building with Engineer Kendall? A.—Once.

stranger became insulting, pointing out at the same time that wires were strung into the house.

When Mrs. Rose threatened to call the police, he turned and broke into a run, past the homes of Marvin Stevens and Daniel McCoy.

Mrs. Rose's screams as he ran brought Stevens and McCoy into the road with revolvers, and they gave chase. The stranger was too fleet, however, and they lost him in the vicinity of the lie-houses.

The posse was organized to search the terrain, especially the ice-houses where several cigarette packages and stubs have been found, and where, it is thought, the murderer may have been hiding away.

SUIT MAY PROVE CLUE.

Beyond this excitement of the day, one of the latest clues in the mystery surrounding the murder of Helen Gillis, eighty, and her sister Georgianna, seventy-eight, in a blood-stained suit of clothing left at a local cleaning establishment by an unidentified man.

Four suits were gathered in by the local police net as a result of a combined hunt by the Hudson, Nashua and Tyngsboro authorities.

Two of the men were released after a rigid examination, but the others, unable to account satisfactorily for their movements in this vicinity over the past five days, are detained in the Nashua police station.

One of those held gave the name of Michael J. Roche, fifty-eight years old, of no fixed abode. He was arrested in Merrimack by Deputy Sheriff Flanders of that town and lodged by him in the Nashua police station.

MYSTERY IS DEEPENED.

The mystery of the brutal clubbing to death of the elderly spinster sisters was further deepened by the retraction of his story by Charles Lefebvre, the fifteen-year-old neighbor of the Gillis women, who last week told the Hudson police he visited their home on Central street on the afternoon of the murder.

Under a severe grilling this afternoon by Attorney General Jeremy Waldron the Lefebvre boy admitted he lied when he described a visit to the Gillis sisters' home on Wednesday evening, the day of the murder, and he said his story about the appearance of a woman in black at the Gillis house on the following day was an untruth. His statements to his attorney general eliminated the hunt for the mysterious woman caller.

MINUTE SEARCH.

The bed of newspapers discovered by Mrs. Roy Bresnahan of the Whiting Block in Nashua in the rear of her coop on the Merrimack river, about a mile from the scene of the Gillis murder, was visited by Chief of Police Goodwin of Nashua and Inspector Edward McCarthy of that city, who made a minute search of the surrounding terrain for clues that might identify the suspicious occupant.

Mrs. Bresnahan told Chief Goodwin that her dog barked continuously Sunday night and she was awakened twice by the loud slamming of an outhouse door just before dawn yesterday.

The police of Hudson requested the Massachusetts State patrol to keep a sharp watch on all stragglers crossing the line out of New Hampshire and this precaution, together with presence of Chief of Police Joseph Pelletier of Tyngsboro among the posses scouring the woods bordering the Merrimack River precluded the possibility of the fellow quarry escaping the police dragnet.

The State patrol under Lieutenant Beaupre of Framingham was dispatched to the inter-State line and they are sweeping the roads and wooded passes to intercept any fugitive attempting to reach Bay State territory.

ELSTON GRILLED ON SHORING OF PICKWICK CLUB WALLS

Q.—How many times into the building next it, that you were familiarizing, with Kendall? A.—Three or four times.

REMOVED PROJECTION.

Q.—Did you talk with Mr. Haven in the building which you demolished? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did he call your attention to a projection in the common wall between both buildings? A.—Yes.

Q.—And as a result of what he said did you remove that projection, which extended eight or nine feet above the Pickwick building? A.—Yes.

Q.—When was that? A.—I don't recall.

Q.—You are familiar with the contract which the owners of the building had with the Pultz Company, general contractors, weren't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—And this contract covered the matter of foundations and material and labor and the razing of the old building; shoring and so forth? A.—Yes.

CONTRACT IS READ.

Q.—Did you bring your contract with the Pultz Company to court today, as you agreed? A.—Yes, The District Attorney has it.

Garland procured the contract from the prosecutor and had the witness compare it with photo-static copy.

Q.—Having compared the two, will you now say whether there is any difference? A.—No. There is not.

Q.—Then when you said yesterday that there was, you were mistaken? A.—Yes.

He was asked to read certain parts of the contract. Elston emphasized that section in which he was expected to "brick up in a workman-like manner the openings in the party wall."

Judge Lummus — Were you known as a sub-contractor? A.—Yes.

Q.—What lateral support did the Pickwick Club building have before you demolished the adjoining building? A.—The twelve-inch wall.

Q.—It also had a six-story building supporting it laterally, didn't it? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you finished demolishing the adjoining building, what lateral support did the Pickwick Club have? A.—The foundation.

Q.—Do you consider a lateral support for the party wall? A.—There was no need of lateral support.

On objection of other counsel for the defence, the answer was excluded

Judge Lummus—The question is whether the foundation furnished lateral support?

Attorney Garland—Did the foundation furnish adequate lateral support from the first story of the roof? A.—It did.

NO SUPPORTS PUT IN.

Q.—You didn't think it necessary to put in shoring to give it greater lateral support? A.—No.

Q.—You didn't put any in, did you? A.—No. Nor anybody else

Elston said those relations were amiable and they had no controversy. He admitted Pultz had not released his bond. He said he would have liked to have had the bond released. Asked if he had borrowed money from Pultz, he said, "No, sir, never."

He said he did try to sell the general contractor some lumber and "offered him an extra good bargain, if he would advance some money."

LOOKED FOR TIE IRONS.

Assistant District Attorney Alpert, in re-direct, took the witness.

Q.—Were you on the scene on the morning of July 4? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you personally examine the debris? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you find any tie or angle irons? A.—Not one.

Q.—Had any land been excavated adjoining when you completed demolishing the building Nos. 14 to 20 Beach street, making it necessary to shore the wall? A.—No.

Re-cross-examination by Joseph F. O'Connell.

Q.—Did you look especially for tie irons on the morning of July 4? A.—I did.

John P. Feeney took the witness.

Q.—What became of the tie irons you said you saw in the party wall? A.—I didn't see any tie irons.

Q.—What became of the irons your men said they found when they dug into the lower part of the wall?

Judge Lummus—On either side of the wall.

Witness—there were irons only on the side of the wall of the building which I demolished.

Q.—What became of those? A.—They went to the junk pile.

Charles A. Kendall, a structural engineer, who lives in Wellaston and is employed by the firm of Haven & Hopkins, Inc., architects, was called. He went to work for the firm on February 25 he said, and made daily visits to the site of the new garage in process of erection on Beach street.

WAS AFRAID OF ROOF.

Mr. Kendall testified that ten days after the April 13 fire in the Pickwick Club he visited the club premises with Mr. Elston. This was on April 23. He said he found the upper stories damaged; the wood had been charred an inch deep and the ceilings had been burned badly. He said the staircase, between the fourth and fifth floors, had been virtually destroyed.

Witness said when he stood on the roof it sagged and lacked the proper stiffness and stability. He hurried off it. Mr. Kendall noticed a bulge in the brick wall front of the club, facing on Beach street.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Haven about the condition of the Pickwick Club building? A.—Yes. I told him it had been badly damaged by fire and was in such condition I thought we ought to report it to the city building department for our own protection.

SAW PULTZ APRIL 26.

Q.—What did Mr. Haven say? A.—He said he thought it would be a good idea to notify the building department.

Q.—Was Mr. Elston there? A.—Yes. He went through the building with me.

Q.—What was the later conference which Mr. Pultz attended? A.—On April 26.

Q.—What was said there? A.—We talked over the building. And how Mr. Elston doubted whether the walls were bonded and the timbers tied.

Q.—Did Elston say anything about the timbers not being tied? A.—No.

Q.—After that second conference did you go to City Hall? A.—I did. On April 24, as near as I can recall it.

Q.—To whom did you talk there? A.—To someone at a desk, first. He referred me to Mr. Roemer.

Q.—What did you say to Roemer? A.—I told him our firm was connected with the building of a garage on Beach street; that there had been a fire in the building adjoining and we were worried about the safety of the latter building. I told him we had decided to go to City Hall and tell about it so it might be inspected.

BULGE WAS A STAIN.

Q.—What did Roemer say? A.—He called in Inspector Hendrick, who made an appointment to go down there with me at 2 o'clock this afternoon. I met Hendrick and we went to the Pickwick Club together. I pointed out the bulge in the brick wall on Beach street. That bulge turned out to be an optical illusion. Owing to the obscuration by smoke it looked like a bulge from across the street, but on close inspection of the wall Hendrick convinced me 't was merely a smoke stain.

Judge Lummus—There was no bulge, then? A.—No.

Attorney Alpert—Not so far as you know?

Judge Lummus—Of course the witness has the right to express his opinion.

Q.—Did you and Mr. Hendricks go inside the Pickwick Club building? A.—Yes. We went up to the fifth floor.

LOOKED ALL RIGHT.

Q.—What did you say? A.—I didn't say much. He looked around to see if there was any space between the floors and the walls. He thought after his inspection that the building was all right.

Q.—Did you mention anything about the walls being charred? A.—Yes. Hendrick said he thought they were.

Q.—Did you talk with Haven after you had inspected the building with Hendrick? A.—Yes. I told him I had gone through the building with Hendrick and he told me there was nothing to worry about.

bride, whom he will take back with him to London.

Through her marriage today she turned her back on a statement made a short time ago in which she declared she was an American and that her children would be brought up Americans. Viscountess Gould was born on the North Dakota ranch.

EX-MUSIC HALL GIRL.

Nearly four decades ago, her father, Alexander Sinclair, ex-officer in His Majesty's forces, settled on a ranch in the West.

Thirty-one years ago, Guinevere Sinclair was born, but a year after her birth, the parents moved to London, and there she spent most of her childhood and early womanhood.

In 1912, as Vera Sinclair, she was placed by George Edwardes, English musical comedy impresario, in a minor role in "The Girl on the Film."

The play was bought by the Shuberts and the cast was brought intact to America, where Vera Sinclair of the music hall resumed her friendship with two American world travelers whom she had met in London the previous year—Anthony Drexel and George J. Gould.

But mostly was she seen in the company of the latter. It was late in 1921 when Mrs. Edith Kingdon Gould, wife of the financier, collapsed on the golf links at Lakewood, and died.

Barely six months later, on May 1, 1922, Vera Sinclair, then the mother of three children, became the bride of Gould and went with him touring the world.

One year later he was taken ill in Egypt, on a journey that had as companions of the Goulds, Lord and Lady Decies, the latter's daughter of George Gould, all died of pneumonia and the former stage girl was left as one of the heirs.

Following his death, she brought suit against the estate, seeking to claim a trust fund of $1,000,000 declared to have been set aside for the three children born before their marriage.

IGNORED BY HEIRS.

In the several court actions which have since ensued, it was brought out that the second Mrs. Gould lived under the name of Mrs. Guinevere Sinclair on an $800,000 estate at Manuraing Island, in Long Island Sound, opposite Rye, N. Y.

Other heirs refused to recognize the Sinclair-Gould offspring until the will of George Jay Gould was probated June 4, 1925.

In that document Gould publicly acknowledged the three as his own, and placed them in the division of the estate on a practical parity with the seven children born to himself and Mrs. Edith Kingdon Gould.

The board of arbitration handling the wage demands of the Boston Elevated carmen, consisting of Judge Nelson P. Brown, as neutral member; Roland W. Boyden, representing the company, and James H. Vahey, for the union, met this afternoon at the State House.

Members of the wage committee of the Carmen's Union conferred with General Manager Edward Dana of the Boston Elevated Railway for the purpose of settling if possible some of the minor points in dispute, thus relieving the arbitration board of some of the work.

This meeting was held at the suggestion of the union officials, who declared they considered the three arbitrators had their hands full in settling the wage question, without being troubled with a mass of other problems.

The arbitration conference took place in the rooms of the Department of Public Utilities at the State House, while the other conference was at the offices of the railway in the Park Square Building.

GAS EXPLOSION STARTS FIRE ON SHIP

An explosion, due to gas in the engine-room of the large motor-driven schooner Maritima, Captain Martin Peterson, called Fireboat 47, Hose 39 and Ladder 18 to the Fish Pier this morning.

Flames following the explosion caused a loss estimated by Third District Fire Chief James Mahoney at $100. The blaze, spectacular for a few moments until got under control, was attended by thick clouds of smoke that attracted many of the workers about the pier to the scene.

The Maritima, owned by the Minot-Olson Company, No. 88 Broad street, formed the outer fringe of a group of five craft tied up to the pier. The explosion was heard and fire noticed by James McGray, who sent in the alarm.

Although the master and several members of the crew were aboard the schooner, no one was injured or burned. Members of the crew remained aboard the craft while firemen were extinguishing the flames.

POLICE SEEK PAIR IN BACK BAY ROBBERY

Two well dressed young thugs are being sought by police throughout Greater Boston following their attack on Robert Weeks, manager of the Motor Car Service Company, at No. 338 Newbury street, Back Bay, and the looting of the company's cash box.

The youths entered the store where the manager was alone, and made a small purchase. While Weeks was making the change, one of the thugs felled him with a blow on the head from some blunt instrument. Then the pair seized the cash box and fled.

FAKE LIQUOR AGENTS STAGE $50,000 THEFT

New York, July 28 (A.P.).—Two armed thieves who at first said they were government agents looking for contraband liquor early today held up and bound a night watchman in the West Side commercial Garage on West street and escaped with two trucks and a load of rubber worth $50,000.

The watchman, Stanislav Galda, was alone in the garage when the men demanded the privilege of searching the place. As soon as they were inside both drew revolvers and took Galda to the rear of the garage, where they tied him to a truck. They then worked methodically gathering their loot.

CONSUELO VANDERBILT UNDER KNIFE

Chelsea Rum Witnesses Grouped To Keep Peace

TESTIFIES LOTTA HAD A CHILD

Cousin of George Manning, Her Husband, on Witness Stand

Timothy A. Manning of Troy, N. Y., testified today in Suffolk Probate Court that his cousin, George Manning, was Lotta Crabtree's husband and that Lotta told him they had a child named Ida.

He testified in behalf of Mrs. Ida M. Blankenburg of Tulsa, Okla., who claims she is Lotta's daughter and heir-at-law to the $3,000,000 estate that the famous actress left to World War veterans and charity.

Lotta's husband, he said, was a clog dancer, whose father objected to the marriage because Lotta was an actress.

When witness testified that he knew George Manning in Blackburn, England, he was questioned in detail about that place by Judge Prest who later explained his questions by remarking:

"I am very much interested in Blackburn, England, I was born there myself."

Manning, the witness, said he came to this country when he was sixteen years old. He was questioned by Attorney Thomas J. Barry, one of counsel for Mrs. Blankenburg.

CAME HERE IN 1877.

"I came to this country in 1877," he said. "My father was Jeremiah Manning, and his brother was Timothy Manning. Timothy Manning had three sons and a daughter, and his second oldest son was Frederick George Percy Manning.

"I saw George Manning in Blackburn, sixteen miles from Leeds, England, when I was a small boy. He was much older and I remember asking him to clog dance for me. George Manning is now dead."

Q.—Was George Manning married? A.—Yes, to Lotta Crabtree.

Q.—What Lotta Crabtree? A.—The great actress.

Manning continued: "In 1902 Lotta Crabtree came to my home in Troy and she wanted to know where Jeremiah Manning was. I told her I was the only Manning living there.

VERY WELL DRESSED.

"She was very well dressed. 'Do you know who I am?' she asked me, and I told her I did not. She said, 'Well, I am Lotta Crabtree.'

"She asked me downstairs to the sidewalk and, starting to cry, she asked me if I knew anything about George Manning. I said I did not know where he was. She asked me where my father was, and I told her in Reading.

"She told me she had a daughter, saying, 'I have a daugter named Ida, but no one knows it. I came to see your father to make sure that George Manning is dead. I hope you will not let anbody know I have been here because I don't want anyone to know I have a daughter.'

"She drove away in a cab, I holding the door for her as she got in. And that was all."

Manning said that when he was still in England his mother got a letter announcing George Manning's marriage to Lotta Crabtree.

"It was from my uncle," he said. "He objected to the marriage. My mother said he was foolish to object, because George was practically an actor himself."

Manning said George Manning's father was "an orator who sold insurance and was wealthy."

Manning said Lotta told him in 1902 that she had a child who was going to school in Iowa.

When he left the witness stand, Mrs. Blakenburg, who was in the rear of the courtroom, stood up and clasped her his hand. Manning kissed her.

They talked and later Manning requested permission to correct his testimony. He said he should have given the dates of Lotta's visit as 1892.

RECALLED BY CHASE.

He was in conversation at the rear of the courtroom a second time with Mrs. Blankenburg, when Ex-Judge Chase, counsel for the Crabtree estate, asked him to take the stand a thir dtime.

Manning then admitted that he did not live on Lake avenue, Troy, as he had said, but only got his mail there. He said there was no number on that house. He said he lived on Norfolk street, Troy.

SHIP RUNS RUM BLOCKADE WITH $250,000 LOAD

New York, July 28 (A.P.)—The government's rum blockade off the Atlantic Coast has been run by the largest liquor-laden vessel ever seized in New York Harbor.

Champagne, whiskey and cordials valued at $250,000 were landed and polished up by bootleggers before customs officials knew what was happening. When they arrived at the busy dock at Dyckman street on the Hudson River they found the 2,000-ton steamship, Augusta, empty except for fifteen bottles of liquor in the officers quarters.

The crew was lolling about the decks in kid gloves. Acting Captain Charles Wilson and twenty-four men were arrested. The ship, a $250,000 twin-screw freighter, was seized.

Edward Barnes, assistant solicitor to the collector of the port, said Wilson should haul down the American flag and hoist the black banner of the pirate. The ship had no customs papers; none of the officers had a license, no log was kept and there were no ship's articles giving the names of the crew.

While a cutter towed the ship to anchorage off the Statue of Liberty the helmsman fouled the wheel in an attempt to beach the vessel off Hoboken, N. J. The cutter's captain, detecting something wrong, swung so sharply toward the middle of the river that the Augusta listed to an agle of forty degrees.

DE WOLF WEDDING STIRS HUB SOCIETY INTEREST

Related but lively interest in the romance of Miss Gertrude Bradford DeWolf of Boston and Bristol, R. I., was being expressed in Boston society circles today. She was married to Bradford Colt DeWolf of Bristol at the home of relatives in that city.

The Rev. Frederick Lee Maryon of Trinity Church, Bristol, officiated. Mark Anthony DeWolf, the bride's brother, gave her in marriage. J. Barnard French was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. DeWolf will make their home in Linden place, Bristol, the house of the late Colonel Samuel P. Colt.

In attendance at the wedding were Miss Minnis DeWolf Perry, Miss Annie Middleton, Miss Alicia Middleton, Mrs. Nathaniel G. Herreshoff and Dr. and Mrs. Halsey DeWolf.

Mr. DeWolf is the son of the late Francesco DeWolf, and is a brother of the Baroness de la Vay of Budapest.

MRS. ANDRE MORIZE A PILGRIM TO ROME

Several Bostonians, including the wife of Professor Andre Morize, Harvard French instructor, and her two children, are among pilgrims who sail tomorrow for Rome aboard the steamship La Savoie of the French Line from New York. It is known as the New England pilgrimage, but composed largely of Catholics from the Rhode Island diocese. The party will be presented to Pope Pius XI and make trips to other European shrines. The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Antona Bove of Rhode Island is the leader of the party, having been selected by Bishop Hickey.

BOSTON K. OF C. LEADERS PLAN DULUTH TRIP

Many prominent Boston Knights of Columbus will attend the Supreme Convention of the order at Duluth, Minn., August 3, 4, 5 and 6. The convention this year has especial significance because national or supreme officers of the organization will be elected.

Headed by Supreme Director William C. Frost and State Deputy Edmund J. Brandon, well known Boston attorneys, more than fifty delegates representing the Massachusetts State Council will leave the South Station in special Pullmans at 7:30 p. m. Friday.

The delegates include William F. Brophy, James P. Daily, Patrick J. Madigan and John S. Quinn of Boston, Philip P. Coveney of Hyde Park, Frank J. Diamond of Lee, Joseph H. Martin of Taunton, and Michael J. Reardon of Salem, representing the State Council.

TO SEE CHICAGO.

Besides the delegates there will be a number of alternates and prominent members of the order who will make the trip.

Sunday will be spent in sightseeing tours in Chicago. The party is scheduled to arrive at Duluth early Monday morning. The Boston party will make its headquarters at the new Hotel Duluth.

Although Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty of Philadelphia was injured yesterday in a railroad accident while on his way home following a tour of Ireland, it is believed he will be able to preside.

The Boston party will leave Duluth on August 6 on the steamer Juniata, crossing Lake Superior to Houghton, Mich., thence through Lake Huron to Mackinac Island, where the party will arrive at 1 p. m. on Saturday.

MASS ABOARD SHIP.

On August 9, mass will be celebrated on board the steamer, the party reaching Detroit at noon, where a stop of an hour will be made. A stop for an hour also will be made in Cleveland the same evening.

The steamer is due at Buffalo at 10 a. m. on August 10. A visit will be made to Niagara Falls, luncheon and evening dinner being provided at the great showplace.

The Massachusetts Knights will leave Buffalo that night and are due in Boston at 11:55 a. m. on August 11.

2 JAIL-BREAKERS GLAD TO SEE CELLS AGAIN

Two prisoners are in solitary confinement at Deer Island today, glad that they can enjoy their bread and water in perfect health, instead of furnishing food for fish in the waters of Shirley Gut.

The men endeavored to escape from the Island, using a heavy plank as a craft to carry them over the turbulent waters of the Gut to Point Shirley.

The two men are John Perkins, 18, of South Boston, serving a year for larceny, and George S. Julien, 25, of No. 48 Adams street, Dorchester, serving six months for an automobile law violation.

HONEYMOON OF MURIEL HALTED

Church and Bride Return to Newport as Consuelo Goes Under Knife

Newport, July 28.—The glint of a surgeon's knife in the electric glare above an operating table, called back from romance and a honeymoon today Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., bride and bridegroom of Saturday.

Somewhere in an unnamed place the former Muriel Vanderbilt and "Freddie" Church, "the Greek God of Harvard," were declared speeding back to Beachmound. Summer home of her mother and hushed house of silence where Consuelo Vanderbilt was undergoing an operation.

Constantly have the bridal couple been in telephonic communication with Beachmound since their departure for the honeymoon, but today, unable longer to endure the suspense, made greater by distance, they turned in their romantic journey and rushed back home.

The operation on Consuelo was for appendicitis, and because Mrs. Vanderbilt wished her daughter to remain in the house rather than go to the Newport Hospital, only two miles away, a room of Beachmound was converted into an operating room.

BLAKE IS SURGEON.

Dr. Joseph Blake of Tarrytown, N. Y., society leader, former Newport Summer resident and distinguished husband of the former Mrs. Clarence Mackay (formerly Katherine Duer) performed the operation.

Assisting him was Dr. Charles W. Stewart of Newport, who has been in attendance on the Vanderbilt family, particularly Consuelo and her aunt, Mrs. Herman Oelrichs, who is said to be seriously ill with a nerve ailment.

Thus in three days was Beachmound transformed successively from a Summer mansion to a house of festivity and then into a dwelling place of silence where death hovered near, held back only by the unerring hand of surgical skill.

Although Consuelo's condition was not regarded seriously on the day of the wedding, the inflamed appendix was reported today to have become worse.

She was stricken just prior to the wedding ceremony, at which she was to have attended her older sister. She was reported, however, to have been a witness to the ritual, returning immediately to her bed.

The physicians announced that the operation had been completely successful and that Miss Vanderbilt was as comfortable as could be expected.

MRS. OELRICHS VERY ILL.

The condition of Mrs. Oelrichs is also regarded as serious, according to reports. The wealthy dowager's nervous condition has affected her mind and it is declared she does not realize her niece has been married, and still refers to her as a single girl.

Mrs. Oelrichs is the widow of one of New York's millionaire shipping magnates and sister of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr. For many years she has been a social leader.

'NOTCHED' GUN FOUND ON AUTO THIEF SUSPECT

James Harrison of Sacramento, who totes a 45 calibre gun with three "notches" in the handle, and J. W. Fisher of Oakland, Cal., were surrendered to United States Marshal William J. Keville today by the Boston police. They are charged with stealing an automobile in Kansas City, Mo., and will be tried in the Federal Court.

The police told Marshal Keville that the men attempted to sell the automobile at a Dorchester garage, near Franklin Park, and thus fell under suspicion. They said when the men were arrested they took from Harrison a big "cowboy gun" with the handle notched to indicate three victims, in true Deadwood Dick fashion.

Marshal Keville is communicating with the Kansas City police prior to turning the case over to the Federal Attorney's office for prosecution.

Girls' Smoke Room Shut; They Loaf Too Much

Because it was too popular, Boston's only exclusive women's store smoking room is placarded with "No Smoking" signs.

The smoking room was located on the sixth floor of an exclusive women's wear shop. It was equipped just like a men's smoking and lounge room in a fashionable club and was intended to give the customers of the store a place in which to rest for a few moments while easing their frayed bargain-counter nerves with a few puffs.

Instead, what happened was that girls thronged in from the streets and sat for hours, according to the matron, idly dragging on cigarette after cigarette, and they even stood in line to wait for the easy chairs in which to loll and smoke.

"It was a haven for all the girls who wanted to smoke without fear of interruption," said the matron.

"They hogged the place and our own customers didn't have a chance.

"So much did the flappers assert themselves and sit around telling silly stories, dotted with hysterical laughter, that they made themselves objectionable and it was necessary at last to put up the 'NO SMOKING' signs."

And so old-fashioned Dame Boston, who stared in horrified amazement at the "Smoking Room for Women" signs over the door of the lounge room in the women's wear shop, can now sit back, even in the room itself, and be satisfied that what she considered an incentive to temptation and smoking defeated its own purpose by its liberality.

Federal Probe Begins With More Than 50 on Hand, Each With a Tale to Relate

The Federal Grand Jury inquiring into the Chelsea rum conspiracy began today in the Federal Building. More than fifty witnesses were present when U. S. Attorney Harold P. Williams and the jury went into session in one of the court rooms.

The witnesses included many prominent Chelsea politicians, chief among them being John E. Beck, former State Senator and member of the Chelsea board of control, and at present representative to the General Court from Chelsea.

There were also present clergymen, professional men, business men, Department of Justice agents, dry agents, bootleggers, policemen and all sorts and conditions of men.

A DAY OFF FOR SOME.

The police officers were Sergeant William O'Connor, Patrolmen John Keating, Peter McGauley, Valentine Elmore, George Linn, William Eaves, Frank Follis and Timothy Cunningham.

The witnesses were all sequestered from the public eye and no one was permitted to approach them. The main body of them were placed under the guard of a deputy marshal in a room adjacent to the one in which the hearing was held. The policemen were in incommunicado in one of the Federal attorney's suite of rooms.

The more socially prominent witnesses were the guests of Assistant Federal Attorney Tilhu D. Stone in his office.

Federal Attorney Williams has issued subpoenas broadcast in his effort to get at the bottom of the conspiracy. For the past three years respectable citizens of Chelsea have complained of the operations of the rum ring in their city. They are all now to be given an opportunity to tell the Grand Jury what they know.

"ROMOLA," WITH GISH SISTERS, AT STATE

A rich tale, superbly photographed and particularly well enacted, is "Romola," screen version of George Eliot's famous novel, with Lillian and Dorothy Gish in the leading roles, which joins the new bill at Loew's State. Ronald Colman appears as the romantic Tito. The film was made in Florence, Italy.

The Gish sisters are together in this picture for the first time since "Orphans of the Storm," and again they show that team work is a fine art in itself.

Nelson Waring and Rollo Hudson, expert pianists, give an excellent performance. They are a special feature on the State program.

MARGIE COATE HEADS PEMBERTON INN BILL

Margie Coate heads the snappy musical comedy revue this week at Pemberton Inn. The "Queen of Syncopation" has a personality that just suits the snappy songs written specially for her. Encores are a feature of her act.

Elizabeth Brown, premier ballroom dancer, assisted by her dancing partner, Dan Moarti and Ray Stewartson's Jazz Orchestra are other attractions. The orchestra furnishes the accompaniment for the feature numbers and also plays for the dansants.

Boston Society Makes Gay Bailey's Beach Rendezvous

Betty Alden

Eleonora Sears, Trim and Trig, Wears the Favorite Sports Attire; Guest of the Rices

BOSTON'S FASHIONDOM down in Newport over the week-end to attend the marriage of Miss Muriel Vanderbilt and Frederic Cameron Church, Jr., made gay rendezvous at Bailey's Beach Sunday and yesterday. Mrs. Hendricks Hallet Whitman (Adelaide Chatfield Taylor), very chic in a peach toned chiffon frock and wide picture hat of king's blue, motored over to Bailey's with Robert Walton Goelet, at whose Newport home she was a guest.

THAT WELL known young Boston woman, Miss Eleonora Sears, made one of her late, infrequent appearances in Newport. Trim and trig as usual, Miss Sears wore her favorite sports attire, a tan whipcord tailored suit and white straw hat. Miss Sears was house guest of Dr. Alexander Hamilton Rice and Mrs. Rice at Mirimar, their Bellevue avenue place. Mrs. Rice's fragile type of beauty (she was Mrs. Widener) was set off with a frock of white and wrap of tan when she arrived at Bailey's.

MRS. FRANCIS P. SEARS, with Mr. Sears, added lustre to Boston's representation. Mrs. Sears wore a frock of yellow flowered crepe, with small hat and wrap of the bright king's blue which Newport favors so much at the moment for feminine attire. Miss Margery Richardson, daughter of the F. L. W. Richardsons of Charles River Village, donned a tailored effect of orchid and small hat of the same pinkish-purple tone, as she walked over Bailey-way. She and F. Murray Forbes are house guests of Grafton Dulaney Cushing at "The Ledges."

MRS. VINCENT ASTOR, in gown and hat of red; Miss Anna Sands, in violet crepe with white hat, arriving at Bailey's with Austin Sands; Mrs. Ogden Warburton, in maize yellow crepe (with a number of masculine satellites in attendance, including Alan Harriman); Edwin Mayne Post, Jr.; Mrs. Ogden Hammond, in frock of orange and red hat, Mrs. Richard V. Gambrell, a vision in yellow crepe frock and hat; Miss Barbara Sands in a Paris frock of black crepe with hat of the same material, smartly accented in white, and Mrs. Williams Burden, attired all in goya red, represented the smart sets of both New York and Newport.

MRS. DANIEL DEMENOAL of the resident Boston set in Newport, Mrs. George Peabody Gardner, Jr., with Mr. Gardner, guests of Mrs. Gardner's sister, Mrs. Dudley Davis of Wyndham Ridge, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Codman, Mrs. Bernard F. Rogers, Jr. (Corinna Higginson) all registered at Bailey's during the fashionable hours of twelve to two.

MRS. ROGERS and Mrs. Codman, by the way, two of the prime movers in today's gala day at Magnolia shops, left Newport in ample time to reach the North Shore for the day. Mrs. Rogers, with Miss Katherine Lane, are in charge of the petas terrier put up by Shaw McKean to aid financial returns today.

Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt (Emily Davies) who entertained at Oakland Farm, her Newport home, in honor of guests attending the Vanderbilt-Church wedding. Last Winter the Vanderbilts lived in Boston.

OF THE resident aristocracy of Newport such leaders as A. J. Drexel Biddle and Mrs. Biddle, the latter in orange, Miss Evelyn in black chiffon with blue; Mrs. Thorn Russell, in rose and white chiffon with goya red hat; William Kisson Vanderbilt, 2nd, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Black, the last named wearing a smart creation of gay red with wide black hat, were at Bailey's.

MRS. WILLIAM WOODWARD (Elsie Cryder), one of the famous Cryder triplets of "The Cloisters," wore a morning suit of knitted balbriggan in tan. Mrs. Woodward is a sister of Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames of Boston and North Easton. Mrs. Ames was Edith Cryder, of the beautiful trio.

BOSTON'S YOUNG SET in Newport also included Miss Mary Otis daughter of Mrs. Herbert Foster Otis and sister of James Otis, who was usher at the Vanderbilt-Church bridal. Miss Otis, in white, with Miss Emelie Winslow, daughter of Admiral Cameron Macrae Winslow, wearing a green frock and hat, arrived at Bailey's with the Winslow sons.

MISS THEODORA WINSLOW of the same group wore pale peach crepe.

COLLEEN MOORE IN NEW FILM AT OLYMPIA

'Desert Flower' and High Class Vaudeville Form This Week's Show

Colleen Moore, fascinating as ever, is with us again, this time in "The Desert Flower" now playing at Gordon's Washington Street Olympia.

Miss Moore scores triumphantly. The story of a child of the great outdoors, Colleen, as Maggie, is left with two legacies at the death of her mother. A step-father of the ugly type, the kind who throws bottles in drinking rampages, and a little baby sister for whom an education must be gotten.

These, added to a will to marry a handsome man and ride in a Pullman train, make Colleen the heroine of a farcial drama. Appealing to the emotions, there are times when one sadly feels for the young mother; there are other moments of hate and anger for the step-father; there is the hope for the boy and cheer for the girl.

Maggie, the desert flower, whose sunshine and smile, bright and twinkling eyes helps the Bull Frog Camp to improvement, is the whole picture. She makes the situations, she acts the funny moments, and on her depends, for the greater part, the success of the picture.

The radio adds a bit to the picture bringing in back flashes of dance music and bedtime stories.

A highly possible and probable picture, "The Desert Flower" is unusually good.

The love story winds around Maggie and the wealthy boy she helps to win. Drinking as a curse is shown in the picture, and Maggie helps Rance to see the folly of his madness.

BALDWIN WINS SKIRMISH TO STAVE OFF COAL STRIKE

London, July 28.—Prime Minister Baldwin today won the preliminary skirmish in his efforts to stave off a coal strike by obtaining from the mine owners an agreement to suspend the strike vote conditionally, the Central News reports.

ANITA STEWART STARS ON ORPHEUM SCREEN

"Leah, Maid O' Mist," the illusion at Loew's Orpheum, is one of the most baffling acts ever seen on the stage. It is presented by Professor Horace Sierak, who places Leah in a box and then allows men to run swords and knives right through the space Leah is apparently occupying.

Jean Granese, operatic star, was received with much favor. Emmett and Lind offer a musical and ventriloquial novelty.

The screen feature is the Peter B. Kyne story, "Never the Twain Shall Meet," with Anita Stewart and Bert Lytell in the leading roles. The South Sea Island scenes present a series of beautiful backgrounds that vie with any ever shown. Miss Stewart makes a dashing heroine. The settings for this new Cosmopolitan masterpiece were designed by Joseph Urban.

'BIG BROTHER' EMERY HEADS BIG KEITH'S BILL

A well-balanced bill headed by Bob Emery, WEEI's well-known "Big Brother," is the offering at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. Mr. Emery played the ukulele, sang a little and otherwise entertained his audience, who gave evidence of sincerely appreciating his efforts.

BRYAN'S DEAD VOICE HURLS SHARP DEFIANCE AT DARROW

BIBLE DEFENDED IN ADDRESS BARRED FROM SCOPES JURY

An introductory note reads: "A sudden decision of the defence to submit the case without argument, and permit a verdict of guilty, prevented the delivery of the speech."

It follows, in part:

By WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

May it please the court, and gentlemen of the jury:

Demosthenes, the greatest of ancient orators, in his "Oration on the Crown," the most famous of his speeches, began by supplicating the favor of all the gods and goddesses of Greece. If, in a case which involved only his own fame and fate, he felt justified in petitioning the heathen gods of his country, surely we, who deal with the momentous issues involved in this case, may well pray to the Ruler of the universe for wisdom to guide us in the performance of our several parts in this historic trial.

Let me, in the first place, congratulate our cause that circumstances have committed the trial to a community like this and entrusted the decision to a jury made up largely of the yeomanry of the State. The book in issue in this trial contains on its first page two pictures contrasting the disturbing noises of a great city with the calm serenity of the country; it is a tribute that rural life has fully earned.

DUTY OF TEACHER.

Let us now separate the issues from the misrepresentations, intentional or unintentional, that have obscured both the letter and the purpose of the law. This is not an interference with freedom of conscience.

A teacher can think as he pleases and worship God as he likes, or refuse to worship God at all. He can believe in the Bible or discard it; he can accept Christ or reject him. This law places no obligations or restraints upon him.

And so with freedom of speech, he can, so long as he acts as an individual, say anything he likes on any subject. This law does not violate any rights guaranteed by any Constitution to any individual.

FLING AT INTELLECTUALS.

What right has a little, irresponsible oligarchy of self-styled "intellectuals" to demand control of the schools of the United States, in which twenty-five millions of children are being educated at an annual expense of nearly two billion of dollars?

Christians must, in every State of the Union, build their own colleges in which to teach Christianity; it is only simple justice that atheists, agnostics and unbelievers should build their own colleges if they want to teach their own religious views or attack the religious views of others.

The evidence shows that the defendant taught, in his own language as well as from a book outlining the theory, that man descended from lower forms of life. Howard Morgan's testimony gives us a definition of evolution that will become known throughout the world as this case is discussed.

Howard, a 14-year-old boy, has translated the words of the teacher and the text book into language that even a child can understand. As he recollects it, the defendant said "A little germ of one-cell organism was formed in the sea; this kept evolving until it got to be a pretty good-sized animal, then came on to be a land animal, and it kept evolving and from this was man."

Mr. White, superintendent of schools, testified to the use of Hunter's civic biology, and to the fact that the defendant not only admitted teaching evolution, but declares that he could not teach it without violating the law.

Mr. Robinson, the chairman of the school board, corroborated the testimony of Superintendent White in regard to the defendant's admissions and declarations.

These are the facts; they are sufficient and undisputed. A verdict of guilty must follow.

EDUCATION IN TENNESSEE.

The people of this State have a high appreciation of the value of education. The State constitution testifies to that in its demand that education shall be fostered and that science and literature shall be cherished. The continuing and increasing appropriations for public instruction furnish abundant proof that Tennessee places a just estimate upon the learning that is secured in its schools.

Religion is not hostile to learning; Christianity has been the greatest patron learning has ever had. But Christians know that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom" now, just as it has been in the past, and they therefore oppose the teaching of guesses that encourage godlessness among the students.

VALUE OF SCIENCE.

Neither does Tennessee undervalue the service rendered by science. The Christian men and women of Tennessee know how deeply mankind is indebted to science for benefits conferred by the discovery of the laws of nature and by the designing of machinery for the utilization of these laws.

Give science a fact and it is not only invincible, but it is of incalculable service to man.

If one is entitled to draw from society in proportion to the service that he renders to society, who is able to estimate the reward earned by those who have given to us the use of steam, the use of electricity and enabled us to utilize the weight of water that flows down the mountainside?

Who will estimate the value of the service rendered by those who invented the phonograph, the telephone and the radio?

Christianity welcomes truth from whatever source it comes, and is not afraid that any real truth from any source can interfere with the Divine truth that comes by inspiration from God himself. It is not scientific truth to which Christians object, for true science is classified knowledge, and nothing therefore can be scientific unless it is true.

Evolution is not truth, it is merely an hypothesis—it is millions of guesses strung together. It had not been proven in the days of Darwin; he expressed astonishment that with two or three million species it had been impossible to trace any species to any other species.

EVOLUTION NOT PROVEN.

It had not been proven in the days of Huxley, and it has not been proven up to today.

It is less than four years ago that Professor Bateson came all the way from London to Canada to tell the American scientists that every effort to trace one species to another had failed—every one. He said he still had faith in evolution but had doubts about the origin of species.

But of what value is evolution if it cannot explain the origin of species? While many scientists accept evolution as if it were a fact, they all admit, when questioned, that no explanation has been found as to how one species developed into another.

Darwin suggested two laws, sexual selection and natural selection. Sexual selection has been laughed out of the class room, and natural selection is being abandoned, and no new explanation is satisfactory even to scientists.

ABSURDITY OF CLAIM.

Some of the more rash advocates of evolution are wont to say that evolution is as firmly established as the law of gravitation or the Copernician theory.

The absurdity of such a claim is apparent when we remember that anyone can prove the law of gravitation by throwing a weight into the air, and that anyone can prove the roundness of the earth by going around it. While no one can prove evolution to be true in any way whatever.

Chemistry is an insurmountable obstacle in the path of evolution. It is one of the greatest of the sciences; it separates the atoms—isolates them and walks about them, so to speak.

If there were in nature a progressive force, an eternal urge, chemistry would find it. But it is not there. All of the ninety-two original elements are separate and distinct; they combine in fixed and permanent proportions. Water is H-2O, as it has been from the beginning. It was here before life appeared and has never changed; neither can it be shown that anything else has materially changed.

DESCENT FROM ANIMALS.

There is no reason to believe that man descended from some inferior animal than there is to believe that a stately mansion has descended from a small cottage.

Resemblances are not proof—they simply put us on inquiry. As one fact, such as the absence of the accused from the scene of the murder, outweighs all the resemblances that a thousand witnesses could swear to, so the inability of science to trace any one of the millions of species to another species, outweighs all the resemblances upon which evolutionists rely to establish man's blood relationship with the brutes.

But while the wisest scientists cannot prove a pushing power, such as evolution is supposed to be, there is a lifting power that any child can understand.

The plant lifts the mineral up into a higher world, and the animal lifts the plant up into a world still higher.

So, it has been reasoned by analogy, man rises, not by a power within him, but only when drawn upward by a higher power.

SPIRITUAL GRAVITATION.

There is a spiritual gravitation that draws all souls toward heaven, just as surely as there is a physical force that draws all matter on the surface of the earth toward the earth's centre.

Christ is our drawing power. He said: "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me," and his promise is being fulfilled daily all over the world.

Most of the people who believe in evolution do not know what evolution means. One of the science books taught in the Dayton high school has a chapter on "the evolution of machinery." This is a very common misuse of the term.

People speak of the evolution of the telephone, the automobile, and the musical instrument. But these are merely illustrations of man's power to deal intelligently with inanimate matter; there is no growth from within in the development of machinery.

Equally improper is the use of the word "evolution" to describe the growth of a plant from a seed, the growth of a chicken from an egg, or the development of any form of animal life from a single cell.

All these give us a circle. Not a change from one species to another.

WHERE MAN STANDS.

Evolution—the evolution involved in this case, and the only evolution that is a matter of controversy anywhere—is the evolution taught by defendant, set forth in the books now prohibited by the new State law, and illustrated in the diagram printed on page 194 of Hunter's Civic Biology.

The author estimates the number of species in the animal kingdom at five hundred and eighteen thousand, nine hundred. These are divided into eighteen classes, and each class is indicated on the diagram by a circle. It begins with protozoa and ends with the mammals.

No circle is reserved for man alone. He is, according to the diagram, shut up in the little circle entitled "mammals," with thirty-four hundred and ninety-nine other species of mammals. Does it not seem a little unfair not to distinguish between man and lower forms of life?

What shall we say of the intelligence, not to say religion, of those who are so particular to distinguish between fishes and reptiles and birds, but put a man with an immortal soul in the same circle with the wolf, the hyena, and the skunk?

What must be the impression made upon children by such a degradation of man?

NOT FOR CHILDREN.

Whatever may be said in favor of teaching evolution to adults, it surely is not proper to teach it to children who are not yet able to think.

The evolutionist does not undertake to tell us how protozoa, moved by interior and resident forces, sent life up through all the various species, and cannot prove that there was actually any such compelling power at all.

And yet, the school children are asked to accept their guesses and build a philosophy of life upon them.

But it is not a laughing matter when one considers that evolution not only offers no suggestions as to a creator but tends to put the creative act so far away as to cast doubt upon creation itself.

SHAKING OF FAITH.

And, while it is shaking faith in God as a beginning, it is also creating doubt as to a heaven at the end of life. Evolutionists do not feel that it is incumbent upon them to show how life began, or at what point in the long-drawn-out scheme of changing species man became endowed with hope and promise of immortal life.

God may be a matter of indifference to the evolutionists, and a life beyond may have no charm for them, but the mass of mankind will continue to worship their creator and continue to find comfort in the promise of their savior that he has come to prepare a place for them.

Christ has made of death a narrow, star-lit strip between the companionship of yesterday and the reunion of tomorrow; evolution strikes out the stars and deepens the gloom that enshrouds the tomb.

If the results of evolution were unimportant, one might require less proof in support of the hypothesis, but before accepting a new philosophy of life, built upon a [illegible] we have a right to demand something more than guesses; "We may well suppose" is not a sufficient substitute for "thus saith the Lord."

If you, Your Honor, and you, gentlemen of the jury, would have an understanding of the sentiment that lies back of the attack against the teaching of evolution, please consider the facts that I shall now present to you.

On pages 180-181 of his "Descent of Man," Darwin says:

"The most ancient progenitors in the kingdom of vertebrata, at which we are able to obtain an obscure glance, apparently consisted of a group of marine animals, resembling the larvae of existing ascidians. These animals probably gave rise to a group of fishes, as lowly organized as the lancelet, and from these the ganoids, and other fishes like the lepidosiren, must have been duplicated.

DARWIN'S DESCENT LAWS.

"From such fish a very small advance would carry us on to the amphibians. We have seen that birds and reptiles were once intimately called together; and the monotremata now connect mammals with reptiles in a slight degree.

"The gap between man and his nearest ally, what line of descent the three higher and related classes, namely, mammals, birds and reptiles, were derived from the two lower vertebrate classes, namely, amphibians and fishes. In the class of mammals the steps are not difficult to conjecture which led from the ancient monotremata to the ancient marsupialsa; and from these to the early progenitors of the placental mammals.

"We may thus ascend to the lemuroidae, and the interval is not very wide from these to the simiadae. The simiadae then branched off into two great stems, the new world and old world monkeys; and from the latter, at a remote period, man, the wonder and glory of the universe, proceeded. Thus we have given to a man a pedigree of prodigious length, but not, it may be said, of noble quality." (Ed. 1874, Hurst.)

WORDS OF UNCERTAINTY.

Note the words implying uncertainty—"Obscure glance," "apparently," "resemblance," "must have been," "slight degree" and "conceive."

Darwin, on page 171 of the same book, tries to locate his first man—that is, the first man to come down out of the trees—in Africa. After leaving man in company with gorillas and chimpanzees he says: "But it is useless to speculate on this subject." If he had only thought of this earlier the world might have been spared much of the speculation that his brute hypothesis has excited.

Our first indictment against evolution is that it disputes the truth of the Bible account of man's creation and shakes faith in the Bible as the Word of God. This indictment we prove by comparing the process described as evolutionary with the text of Genesis. It not only contradicts the Mosaic record as to the beginning of human life, but it disputes the Bible doctrine of reproduction according to kind—the greatest scientific principle known.

Our second indictment is that the evolutionary hypothesis carried to its logical conclusion, disputes every vital truth of the Bible. Its tendency, natural, if not inevitable, is to lead those who really accept it, first to agnosticism and then to atheism.

Evolutionists attack the truth of the Bible, not openly at first, but by using weasel-words like "poetical," "symbolical," and "allegorical" to suck the meaning out of it.

DARWIN'S CHANGE.

It may be a surprise to your honor and to you, gentlemen of the jury, as it was to me, to learn that Darwin spent three years at Cambridge, studying for the ministry.

This was Darwin as a young man, before he came under the influence of the doctrine that man came from a lower order of animals. The change wrought in his religious views will be found in a letter written to a German youth in 1873 and printed on Page 277 of Vol. I of the life and letters above referred to.

The latter begins: "I am much engaged, an old man, and out of health, and I cannot spare time to answer your questions fully—nor indeed can they be answered. Science has nothing to do with Christ, except insofar as the habit of scientific research makes a man cautious in admitting evidence. For myself, I do not believe that there ever has been any revelation. As for a future life, every man must judge for himself between conflicting vague probabilities."

SCIENCE AND CHRIST.

Note that "Science has nothing to do with Christ, except insofar as the habit of scientific research makes a man cautious in admitting evidence."

Stated plainly, that simply means that "the habit of scientific research" makes one cautious in accepting the only evidence that we have of Christ's existence, mission, teachings, crucifixion and resurrection, namely the evidence found in the Bible. To make this interpretation of his words the only possible one, he adds "for myself, I do not believe that there ever has been any revelation."

In rejecting the Bible as a revelation from God, he rejects the Bible's conception of God, and he rejects also the supernatural Christ of whom the Bible, and the Bible alone, tells.

And, it will be observed, he refuses to express any opinion as to a future life.

When Darwin entered upon his work he was "quite orthodox and quoted the Bible as an unanswerable authority on some point or morality." Even when he wrote "the Origin of Species" the thought of "a first cause, having an intelligent mind in some degree analagous to man," was strong in his mind.

It was after that time that "very gradually, with many fluctuations," his belief in God became weaker. He traces this decline for to and concludes by telling us that he cannot pretend to throw the least light on such abstruse problems—he religious problems above referred to.

"It is a tribute that rural life has fully earned."

At the bottom of a page the printer had set "Godliness." The hand that was soon to be stilled in death corrected it to read: "Godlessness."

Further, as the defender of the faith, read into what was to be the last work for his mighty voice, he has written, as an afterthought, this: "A child into whom a mother has poured her life and for whom a father has labored."

His Sincerity As Well As His Ability Made Mr. Bryan Great

When a man is a very forceful and brilliant advocate of one side of a question, he creates many antagonists while he lives, among those opposed to his views. It is only after his death that the loftiness of his purposes as well as the power of his personality and the effectiveness of his advocacy receive the recognition which is his due.

Mr. Bryan was a great man, not only because of his abilities, but because of his sincerity. He was one of the greatest advocates the world has ever known, and he always used his abilities to forward his convictions and never prostituted them under any circumstances or for any reason in support of any cause in which he did not wholly and sincerely believe.

This can be said of only a few great advocates, but it can absolutely and unreservedly be said of Mr. Bryan, and should always be remembered to his lasting honor and glory.

It is not possible for all people to agree with a man who possesses very positive views and expresses them with intense force and effectiveness, but it ought to be possible for all our people to realize that Mr. Bryan's views were always genuinely Democratic, that his opinions and expressions were always sincerely in support of what he honestly conceived to be the welfare of the great majority of his American fellow citizens.

There is no higher praise to be paid a public man than to say that he was extremely able, entirely sincere and wholly devoted to the interests of his fellow men.

With such great abilities as Mr. Bryan possessed and with such high purposes, his influence in the life of the nation has always been of the utmost value because there has been great need of an uncompromising democratic force like Mr. Bryan in the community to offset the autocratic and aristocratic tendencies of our time.

Mr. Bryan served his country and his people well, and while paying him the honors he deserves and mourning his departure from the scene of his great and beneficial activities, we must hope that some other great man will arise who will continue the fight for essential democracy which Mr. Bryan so long and so ably led.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

Bryan Led Fight for Purity---Coolidge

The following telegram to Mrs. William Jennings Bryan was sent from Swampscott by President Coolidge:

My dear Mrs. Bryan:

THE sudden death of Mr. Bryan brought a sense of personal loss to Mrs. Coolidge and myself. It was only the other day that he had been our guest at the White House. We wish to extend to you and your family our most heartfelt sympathy.

Mr. Bryan has been a prominent figure in public affairs for a third of a century. He has been a leader in the advocacy of many moral reforms and was representative of the effort for purity in our political life.

He was endowed with the great gift of eloquence. The sincerity of his motives was beyond dispute. He was three times chosen the head of a great political party and held the exalted office of Secretary of State. His career is another example of what American opportunity affords to those who have the will industriously to apply themselves.

It would be difficult to find among his contemporaries anyone with so large a circle of friends and acquaintances who had so generously bestowed upon him their esteem and confidence.

I trust that you may be given great consolation in remembering all his worth and in the abiding faith that a Divine Providence has ordered all things well.

Sincerely yours,

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

THOUSANDS SEE BRYAN'S FACE AT DAYTON

Dayton, Tenn., July 28 (A.P.)—As the body of William Jennings Bryan lay in simple state at the home of a friend here today, people of America paid him sympathetic tribute.

While others from among their midst poured messages of condolence into the little white cottage which housed the body of the commoner, unveiled friends, whose causes he had championed, mourned a leader, silently.

Of widely political views, he had found in them a common chord when he came forward as a defender of the inspired Bible and revealed religion.

Even as news came from Washington that arrangements had been made for burial of their loved leader among the nation's heroes, many were penning messages of sympathy to the widow.

Of the white members of the immediate family were hurrying across the continent from California and from other Western and Middle States, these admirers were discussing his virtues in homely phrases.

A guard of six former service-men in uniform from the Navy and Army presents the only formal feature of the public viewing. They are members of the Dayton Post of the American Legion.

Mrs. Ruth Owen Joined her widowed mother here early today with her husband, Major Reginald Owen, who has been accompanying her on a lecture tour, and Mrs. Sherman Jennings Coolidge, wife of former Governor Jennings of Florida. The party will accompany the funeral party to Washington tomorrow.

The route chosen as most direct to Washington includes stops at Chattanooga, Knoxville, Bristol, Roanoke and Lynchburg.

BRYAN'S LAST WORDS WERE IN PRAISE

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 28 (A.P.)—Lying in the desk of George F. Milton, president and editor of the Chattanooga Times, is a document that some believe today will go down in history as one of the most masterful gratifications of revealed religion ever written since Bible days.

It is the commoner's last proof of his intended speech—an answer to evolutionists.

There are nine sheets of it, galley length, each sheet bearing the outpourings, in pencil, made by the great Nebraskan but a few short hours before he went to meet the God he labored his whole life long to glorify.

Here and there are interlineations bearing words of praise of his maker and the people hereunto he loved.

On the first sheet one sees written after the words . . . "civil security of the country," this mend to the faithful Tennesseans he loved:

Plain Presbyterian Services for Bryan

Washington, July 28 (I.N.S.)—Although plans are still incomplete for the funeral here of William Jennings Bryan, it is understood that the services will be held at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church on Friday.

Ben G. Davis, former secretary to Bryan, in charge of the local arrangements, said today he did not believe Mrs. Bryan would want a military funeral, notwithstanding the Commoner is to be buried in Arlington cemetery among the military heroes of the Republic.

In accordance with orders from President Coolidge flags on all public buildings in the Capital were at half staff today and will remain so until after Bryan is buried.

Virtually Every Square Inch of Hero's Body Riddled With Shell

New York, July 28 (AP)—Frank Hasselberger was preparing today for his forty-first operation in the last seven years.

Army surgeons, determined to put Hasselberger together again so that he looks and feels as he did before he was torn almost to pieces in France seven years ago, will operate on him again at the Walter Reed Hospital in Washington next week.

Hasselberger enlisted in the regular army and was one of the first men sent to France.

RIDDLED WITH STEEL.

On September 28, 1918, the section of trench in which he was stationed was [illegible] German airplanes and he was taken to a first aid station. There [illegible] and apparently dead. There was a piece of steel in almost every square inch of his body.

The Walter Reed Hospital surgeons decided to reconstruct what was left of Hasselberger's body.

They restored his sight completely and then devoted themselves to skin grafting operations and plastic surgery on his body. It was necessary to do a little at a time, as the veteran was weak.

VETERAN HOPEFUL.

Hence the forty operations over a period of seven years on all parts of his body.

Hasselberger still can't get around very well, but he sees perfectly and he has hope.

"After a couple of dozen operations," he said today, "they figure they'll be able to start work in earnest on me."

LA FOLLETTE'S WIDOW WON'T SEEK SEAT

Washington, July 28 (A.P.).—Mrs. Robert M. La Follette formally announced today that she would not seek the seat in the United States Senate made vacant by the death of her husband.

In a statement addressed to women's organizations which had urged her to make the race, she expressed the belief that she would perform a greater service for the Progressive cause by devoting herself to the task of writing her husband's biography from 1912 to the time of his death, from "a wealth of notes and material," prepared by the Senator.

Mrs. La Follette's statement is expected to clear the way for an early announcement by Governor Blaine of a special election to fill out the unexpired term of the leader of the Independents. Several of the La Follette lieutenants are known to have aspirations for the office.

Charlotte wants a baby sister, and George would like one, too. Charlotte and George both are twelve, and are foster brother and sister. Charlotte is the daughter of Mrs. E. C. Taylor and George the son of Mr. Taylor.

This is one of the reasons why Mrs. Taylor and her husband are willing to either adopt or care for temporarily little Frances Marion Paul. Little Frances Marion is the five months' old daughter of Mrs. Frances Paul of Brockton, who brought her to the office of the Boston Evening American with the request that an appeal be made for some kind family to give her a home.

Mrs. Paul's husband, Herman, is out of work—he was a shoe laster in Brockton—and ill fortune has been hovering over the Paul home.

Mrs. Paul wants her daughter brought up in the home of some nice family—not in a charity home.

Mrs. Taylor wants to see Mrs. Paul and talk things over with her. She feels the deepest sympathy for the mother who believes she must give up her baby.

Mrs. Taylor asserts she is perfectly willing, if need be, to either adopt little Frances Marion or to give her a home until her own mother's circumstances are such that she can take back her small daughter.

The Taylors at present are at No. 7 Linden Park street.

Defects Hold Back 2 Million School Pupils Yearly

Washington, July 28 (A.P.).—The Bureau of Education estimates that because of mental and physical defects, about one-half of the 4,000,000 American children who enter the public schools annually fail of promotion to the second grade.

These so-called "repeaters" cost each district from $72 to $80 annually per pupil. To offset this the bureau wants school beginners given mental and physical examinations before school opens.

OVERALLS IN LEAK SAVE RICH YACHTSMEN

Chicago, July 28 (A. P.).—Half a dozen of Chicago's wealthiest sportsmen probably owe their lives to the presence of mind in stuffing a pair of overalls into a leak, an inch wide and three feet long, in their yacht, Polaris II., outstanding favorite to win the 331-mile Chicago-Mackinac Island race.

The craft, once owned by J. Pierpont Morgan, leading the race returned to port after ten hours of perilous adventure fighting a gale on Lake Michigan.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 28 (A.P.).—Nine persons were severely bruised and shocked when a Pennsylvania bridge train, drawing 12 coaches carrying several hundred commuters to the seashore, was derailed, just inside the city limits.

James A. Flaherty, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, Atlantic City, suffered bruises and shock. He returned today from Ireland.

COOLIDGE BOY PAYS VISIT TO SHOE PLANTS

President's Son Sees How the Shoes Are Made at Beverly and Lynn

Beverly, July 28.—John Coolidge, son of President and Mrs. Coolidge, looked over the shoe business today from the ground up.

Accompanied by Roy Olsen, a Swampscott friend and former shoe machinery company employe; Lieut. Edgar Allan Poe, Jr., in charge of the marine guard at the Summer White House; Lieut. Commander Wiltse and Lieut. Commander Wright, both of the Presidential yacht Mayflower, the President's son called at the big plant of the United Shoe Machinery Corporation.

Frank T. Wentworth, the superintendent, assigned three experts to show the party about.

After the tour of the plant John and his friends went to Lynn. There they visited the plant of A. E. Little & Co.

Coolidge Supports Co-operative Market Bill

Swampscott, July 28 (A.P.).—Discussion of the agricultural situation by President Coolidge and congressional leaders visiting White Court has revealed a general agreement that legislation in the next Congress be limited to enactment of a co-operative marketing bill. This is the main recommendation of the President's agricultural conferences remaining to be translated into law.

President Coolidge is of the opinion it would be best for Congress to work out the details. Senator Curtis of Kansas, the Republican leader, when here a week ago, expressed the view that farmers could be best aided by encouraging co-operative marketing.

This opinion also was expressed by Representative Purnell of Indiana, ranking Republican of the House Agriculture Committee, who called on the President.

Reporting that farmers of the Middle West were enjoying prosperity, with good prices in prospect for their crops, Purnell said he believed the attention of Congress should be centered on co-operative marketing.

In the last Congress he championed the measure of the McNary-Haugen bill, designed to encourage exportation of surplus grain, but apparently has abandoned his advocacy of the measure.

U.S. INJUNCTION AGAINST HUB BUS LINE

Judge George W. Anderson in Federal court today enjoined the Portland, Boston and Worcester Bus Company from doing an intra-state passenger business in Massachusetts.

The company's principal business is between Boston and Worcester, although it operates buses between Boston and Portland.

Under a recent ruling of the Supreme Court there can be no interference with interstate bus lines until Congress makes some law for their regulation; but Judge Anderson held that interstate bus lines must conform to the State's requirements on all business originating and ending within State boundaries.

The injunction was granted on the petition of the Boston and Worcester Street Railway Company and the New York Central (Boston and Albany) Railroad. The petitioners alleged that the bus line was a trespasser on the Massachusetts highways, not having conformed to the State laws, and that it was injuring the business of the petitioners. It will become effective as soon as the receiver for the Boston and Worcester Street Railway files a bond for $50,000. The New York Central, being financially sound, was not required to file a bond.

The bond was required in order that the bus company could collect damages if it were found to be within its rights on final adjudication.

NAVY FLIERS BLAMELESS IN FATAL AIR CRASH

Honolulu, July 28 (A.P.).—The court of inquiry to investigate the two airplane accidents in which First Lieutenant Charles L. Morse of Lancaster, N. H., lost his life, found that Morse and Chief Petty Officer Hoffman, whose naval plane collided with that which Morse was driving, were blameless. It was decided that the accidents were due to the extreme danger incident to the "blind angle" at which the airplanes were approaching each other.

LINEMAN HIT BY 66,000 VOLTS TO SURVIVE SHOCK

Greenfield, July 28 (A.P.).—Earl Lingham, a lineman employed by the New England Power Company, sustained a shock of 66,000 volts of electricity and will live, physicians at the Warren Hospital here said today.

Lingham, on an inspection tour, climbed a high tension tower and touched a circuit which he thought was dead. His clothing was burned off and his body scorched from the neck to the knees.

Boston to Furnish White House in Colonial Style

From old Boston, where Colonial furniture was made before the White House at Washington was built, has gone the first offer of Colonial furniture for re-decorating the "first mansion of the land."

"Horrible! Frightful! Terrible!" the present White House furniture has been described by R. T. H. Halsey, interior decorator for the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, and one of the redecorating committee for the executive mansion.

The committee, discovering that President and Mrs. Coolidge's sleeping quarters were fitted with fourteen styles of furniture, decided to refit the mansion and made an appeal for Colonial contributions.

G. A. Beckhard, who is identified with a Boston company making Colonial reproductions of furniture, has offered the committee and Mrs. Coolidge a selection.

Decorator Halsey has asked for photographs of the Boston pieces offered by Beckhard, and in the Fall it is possible President and Mrs. Coolidge may be taking their ease in chairs from "back home."

G. O. P. WOMEN HOLD OUTING AT DANVERS

The Republican Women's Club of Massachusetts sponsored a delightful garden party in which 300 members from all parts of the State attended. The affair was held at Putnam Lodge on the Danvers estate of Mrs. P. W. Calga, who acted as hostess. Mrs. Charles Masury, chairman of the Essex County District, presided.

Several important political issues, including the "Veterans' Preference Bill," were subjects of addresses made by the speakers. Mrs. Frank B. Hall of Worcester, president of the Women's Council, interested her audience in behalf of the ex-service men.

This topic brought Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers of Lowell, first woman Congressman to go to Washington, to the meeting.

Other speakers included Colonel A. Piatt Andrews, Congressman of Essex County; Mrs. Fred B. Hart of Lynn, who spoke on "My Year in the House of Representatives"; Mrs. Fred P. Bagley, chairman of the political department of the club, who talked on "Mrs. Peabody U. S. A." in which she stressed the value of home industry and encouraged its development.

Mr. Sargent H Wellman of Topsfield, representative of the Sixth District, outlined the "budget" for the coming year, and Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird of Boston, added her bit of praise, and advice to the club and spoke on the great things she had for the future clubhouse of the Massachusetts Republican Club.

The meeting was held in the remodeled barn on Oak Knoll estate. Made into an attractive building Putnam Lodge added an even greater lustre to the party.

Among the well-known members present were Mrs. Patch of Gloucester, Mrs. Athol and Mrs. Palmer of Peabody, Mrs. Rand of Haverhill, Mrs. Loring of Beverly, Mrs. W. P. Brown of Danvers and Mrs. Perkins of Boston.

PHILLIPS TELLS COOLIDGE OF BELGIUM'S CONDITION

Swampscott, July 28 (I.N.S.).—First-hand information of conditions in Belgium were brought to President Coolidge today by William Phillips, American ambassador. Phillips is on leave of absence and vacationing on the North Shore, called on the President at White Court and discussed the coming to the United States of the Belgium debt commission in August.

MUSSOLINI BARS U. S. REPORTER FROM ITALY

Chicago Tribune Correspondent Deported; Paper Files Protest at Washington

Chicago, July 28 (A.P.).—The Chicago Tribune says that George Seldes, its Rome correspondent, has been ordered to leave Italy by the Mussolini Government.

The information was contained in a dispatch just received by the Tribune, it says. Messages from Seldes last week told of demands made by the Fascisti foreign office through Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher to make Seldes leave Italy on the contention that he was depicting the Mussolini Government "in the worst possible light," and that he presented in his dispatches the views of the political antagonists of Premier Mussolini.

The Tribune says that on Wednesday a group of American correspondents in Rome signed a letter asking, through Ambassador Fletcher, for a conference with Under-Secretary Gandit of the Italian Foreign Office to protest against the treatment of Seldes as unfaly and high-handed. They said they proposed to ask their respective newspapers to withdraw them from Rome if the government persisted in its action against Seldes.

In a message to Secretary of State Kellogg Friday the Tribune said it had reason to fear that in connection with the threatened expulsion or deportation of the correspondent from Rome, Mr. Seldes' life or physical safety fas imperilled.

"Mussolini ministry in Rome has become displeased with dispatches sent out by Seldes. Respectfully request you ask American Embassy to intercede to protect Seldes from threatened violence," the dispatch added.

WOMAN'S FACE SCARRED, SUES SKIN SPECIALIST

Mrs. Frederick C. Dobbe of Brookline today filed suit for $10,000 damages in Federal Court against Elizabeth Arden and Thomas J. Lewis, skin specialists, who, she alleges, burned and poisoned her face by their treatments.

The suit was originally brought in the State courts, but the defendants were residents of New York, although having an office in Boston. Mr. Dobbe also filed suit against them for $5,000.

The husband and wife allege they relied upon the statements of the defendants that they were qualified skin specialists. Mrs. Dobbe alleges her face was permanently scarred.

Russian Prince, in Duel, Wounded by French Count

Versailles, France, July 28 (A.P.).—A duel of unusual ferocity, understood to have been the outgrowth of a political argument, was fought in a forest clearing near here between an elderly Russian admiral, Prince Vladimir Troubetzkoi, and a young Frenchman, Count Stephen De Pighetti De Rivasso.

Swords were the weapons. The combatants went at each other with such vigor that the seconds became really alarmed they would do serious harm, and when, in the fourth bout, the Prince's energy appeared to fail and the Count ran him through the arm, they seized the chance to stop the duel.

RECEIVER FOR BROKERS CAN SELL SECURITIES

Bartholomew A. Brickley, receiver for C. P. Dow & Company, petitioned into bankruptcy Monday, today filed a motion with Judge James A. Lowell in the Federal Court to be allowed to sell certain securities owned by the alleged bankrupts "as perishable property." The petition set forth in detail the amount of the securities, but declared the creditors of the company were liable to suffer losses if the receiver was not permitted to sell them at opportune times. Many of the securities were owned free and clear by the alleged bankrupts, but many are subject to various forms of lien. Judge Lowell granted the petition.

$1,500 IN RUM STOLEN FROM DRUG STORE

Thugs Batter In Doors, Smash Bars, to Make a Rich Haul in Malden

Forcing their way through heavily barred and bolted doors at the drug store of A. Zarsky, No. 273 Salem street, Malden, early today, thugs got away with fifteen cases of bottled in bond liquors valued at $1,500 and $50 worth of cigars.

The thugs evidently were familiar with the premises. They ripped away the cellar windows and broke through doors that not only were locked but were heavily barred with three-inch timbers.

The robbery was discovered by Patrolman Abbott Cass, who notified Zarsky at his home at Winthrop.

AILMENTS OF YOUNG GIRLS

Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

School Teacher's Experience

Evanston, Wyoming.—"A few years ago I had troubles every month such as girls often have, and would suffer awfully every time. I was teaching school and it made it hard for me as I had to go to bed for two or three days. One day my mother suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which I did, and it did wonders for me. In the course of a year I married and after my first baby was born I got up too soon and it caused a displacement. This troubled me so that I could hardly walk or do my housework. I knew what the Vegetable Compound did for me before so I took it again. It strengthened me and now I have five little kiddies. The eldest is six, the baby is five months old and I have twin boys three years old and a boy of five years. I do all my own housework, washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I owe my health to your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. VERBENA CARPENTER, 127 2nd Avenue, Evanston, Wyoming.

350 ORPHANS TO BE GUESTS OF BOSTON K. C.

Fifth Summer Outing Will Be Held at Norumbega Park Thursday

Three hundred and fifty children of St. Vincent's Orphanage and the Home for Destitute Catholic Children will be given an outing next Thursday at Norumbega Park, as guests of Boston Chapter, Knights of Columbus. This is the fifth of the series of outings provided by Boston Chapter for the inmates of the orphanages of Boston.

The children will spend the morning hours at the Park Zoo and at games provided by the committee, after which they will enjoy a luncheon at the Norumbega Park restaurant. A launch ride, the merry-go-rounds, sea planes, pony rides and theatre will be enjoyed until the evening.

Manager Will White of Norumbega Park is working in conjunction with the committee and is providing special features.

John Jennings is chairman of Boston Chapter, and Edward A. Hurley is in charge of the outings, assisted by James J. Doherty, Charles P. Leahy, D. Joseph Manning, Joseph A. Ochs, A. L. Dillard, James J. Murphy, Andrew J. Gedid, Bernard F. Horrackamp, Dennis J. McLaughlin, John Jennings, Jr., and James S. Husslon.

Old Folks Town to Win Prize in Maine

Augusta, Me., July 28.—How many residents of the State of Maine could qualify for membership in a "Maine three-quarter century club?" In other words, how many Maine men and women have reached and passed the age of seventy-five years?

With Governor Brewster's permission it was announced that the Maine city or town which files the longest list of residents above the age of seventy-five in proportion to population, will be awarded a prize. A State committee will receive and tabulate the returns and decide upon the prize-winning city or town.

RUSS DANCER TO WED NOTED ENGLISHMAN

John M. Keynes Is to Take Lydia Lopoukhova, Duped in "Wedding," as Bride

London, July 28 (A.P.).—The engagement is announced of Miss Lydia Lopoukhova, Russian dancer, and John Maynard Keynes, Fellow and Bursar of Kings College, Cambridge, who was principal representative of the British treasury at the Paris peace conference.

In January of this year Lydia Lopoukhova was granted a decree nullifying her marriage to Randolfo Barocchi, on the ground that he was already married when she went through the ceremony with him in 1916. At the time of the marriage Barocchi was secretary to the director of the ballet Russe, in which Mme. Lopoukhova was appearing at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

Keynes has fulfilled a number of government commissions the last fifteen years. He was a member of the Royal Commission on Indian Finance and Currency, 1913-14, and in 1919 served as deputy for the Chancellor of the Exchequer on the Supreme Economic Council. He has published a number of works on financial subjects.

Keynes resigned as economic adviser to the Versailles peace conference when he could not persuade the powers that the terms of peace they were framing in his opinion could never be enforced. Subsequently, in 1919, he published a book called "The Economic Consequences of the Peace," which set European statesmen in a turmoil by stating that Germany never could pay all that was demanded.

In 1922 he published another treaty volume called "A Revision of the Treaty."

'MOCK MARRIAGE' VICTIM ENGAGED

Lydia Lopoukhova, Russian dancer, who will wed John Maynard Kaynes, noted British diplomat and author of several books on the Versailles treaty. In 1916 she was "married" in New York to Randolfo Barocchi, but learned he already had a wife and that she wasn't married at all.

GIRL SCOUTS HOLD 'INDIAN' CAMP TOUR

Holliston Misses Use Native Names While Tenting Out at West Gloucester

Something new in camping was developed by twenty-four members of the Holliston Girl Scouts troop, who have just finished two weeks in the open at Wingaersheek Beach, West Gloucester.

The girls, under the leadership of Mrs. Pauline M. Dawson, the captain, played Indian during the camping period, even taking Indian names, some of which were Misatik, or "the big stick," for Captain Dawson; "Nagamed, or "the story teller," for her mother, Mrs. C. A. H. Smith; Mashkiki, "medicine man," for Miss Eleanor Hanson, the nurse; and Euskid, "craftsman," for Miss Ruth Banks, assistant to Mrs. Dawson.

The camp was marked with Indian insignia, including a totem pole. The daily activities included swimming and games, instruction in coloring and trimming straw hats, whittling of toasting forks, nature study and study of ocean life, and suppers on the beach with the "Indians" doing their own cooking.

Camp letters, large blue "W's," on white backgrounds, were awarded to all who met the requirements in cabin order, personal cleanliness, promptness, the sharing of responsibility, originality and other qualities.

FAIR, COOL WEATHER COMES OUT OF STORM

Forecaster Loveland of the Weather Bureau today predicted several days of fair, cool, pleasant weather for Boston. The storm centre, which caused the deluge in this vicinity Monday, has moved Northeastward and is central today over Nova Scotia.

Following it is an immense area of high barometric pressure extending from the Atlantic to the Rockies, and central over the Dakotas, where temperatures as low as 48 degrees were recorded early today.

The fair weather area extends as far south as Oklahoma and Northern Texas and will be several days passing over Boston.

'DOUG' FEARED BY PICKFORD PLOTTERS

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28 (A.P.).—Difficulties which might be experienced in kidnaping Mary Pickford, screen star, were entered in records of the court where three men are on trial charged with a plot to kidnap the actress and hold her for $200,000 ransom.

The obstacles which the State charged the men discussed were contained in the alleged conversation of the trio, obtained by police through the use of a physician's stethoscope.

The major obstacle, according to the documents, was in "picking up" the actress, and the effectiveness of the athletic ability of Douglas Fairbanks, her husband, if they had to tear her aggay from him. Then again the alleged conversational statement said, if Miss Pickford carried a gun and drew it on them "things would not be so good."

The plot was revealed by putting a physician's stethoscope to the crack under a hotel door. The operator of the listening device told in part what he heard.

Reading from notes he took while the words of the alleged conspirators came to him from an adjoining hotel room through the stethoscope, Glenn Gravatt, a police shorthand reporter, related to the jury how the defendants sought to agree on a plan to kidnap some one and finally picked Mary Pickford.

M. T. Parsey, a former roommate of C. A. Stephens, one of the accused, declared the plot to kidnap film notables was hatched three years ago. Pola Negri was discussed as a possible victim, he said, but the idea was abandoned when they feared she could not raise the funds to obtain her release.

He also told of a plan to kidnap Jackie Coogan, which was dropped because Coogan was a court ward.

The others on trial are Adrian Wood and Claude Holcomb, truck driver.

WIFE DRAWS OUT SNAKE POISON; SAVES HUSBAND

New York, July 28 (A.P.).—Friends of Frederick O. Zabriskie, a retired broker of Hackensack, N. J., learned today that he had been saved from death by a snakebite when Mrs. Zabriskie sucked the poison from a wound. A copperhead bit him in the leg when he and Mrs. Zabriskie were picking flowers in a field outside Bowing Rock, N. C., where they are passing the Summer. As their chauffeur was rushing them back to town, Mrs. Zabriskie removed her husband's shoe and stocking and sucked the poison out. Mr. Zabriskie was in a semi-stupor when they reached their hotel. There three physicians treated him and they say their successful efforts were due to Mrs. Zabriskie's prompt action.

CRISIS LOOMS BETWEEN JUGOSLAVIA AND GREECE

Rome, July 28 (A.P.).—Dispatches from the Balkans report tension between Jugoslavia and Greece. The latter is described as fearing Jugoslav attempts at expansion, as being excited at the sending of a Serbian military mission to Turkey and as alarmed at the ordering by Serbia of army manoeuvres near the Greek frontier.

Mayor Passes Up Chair at Debate On Evolution

No evolution stuff for Mayor Curley.

Today he declined an invitation to act as chairman at a debate to be held in Boston next October between Clarence Darrow and John Roche Straton. Pressure of business will keep the Mayor busy, just about that time.

The business will in all probability be politics, as the city election takes place the third day of next November.

The debate, in the process of making, will be held under the auspices of the Boston Educational Forum, in Mechanics Building.

12 MORE DAYS FOR GIFTS TO POLICE FUND

Alexander Fund

Boston American	$1,000.00
Previously acknowledged	4,776.39
Haskell Cohen	2.00
Mrs. Samuel Franks	.50
Total to date	$5,778.89

Twelve more days remain for contributions to the Alexander Fund—and today is included in the dozen.

One week from next Saturday will be the last opportunity afforded the public to aid dependents of Police Inspector Benjamin Alexander, whose life was snuffed out when the Pickwick Club collapsed on the dawn of Independence Day.

As one method of supporting the movement sponsored by the Boston Evening American to aid the valiant police inspector's widow and her six children, will be the monster all-star theatrical performance to be given on the night of August 7 in Waldron's Casino.

Every playgoer in Boston should support that performance, for attendance means pleasure to the audience—it means the pleasure that derives through a kindly act, than which there is no greater pleasure.

Waldron's Casino has been closed through the Summer, but in the manner of theatrical folk, who are always "on call" for a good deed and for work without recompense, the management offered to re-open the playhouse in the aiding of the fund.

Remember then—the night of August 7.

But personal contributions are requested none the less. The fund for the widow and dependent children Inspector Alexander gave more than money; he gave his life.

Boston folk can at least give money.

DRINKS POISON AS HIS WIFE LOOKS ON

In the presence of his wife, Thomas Smith, 44 years old, attempted to end his life by drinking poison in his home at No. 96 West Cedar street, West End. Removed to the Haymarket Relief Hospital, he refused to tell what caused him to try to commit suicide.

2 WOMEN AND 4 MEN IN STOLEN CAR CRASH

Six persons, two of them women, came to grief on the Taunton-Brockton turnpike, near Hockamuck swamp, in a stolen sedan.

The machine, which was the property of D. W. Corey of Boston and Swampscott, is a total wreck and Mr. Corey's planned auto trip this week has been abandoned temporarily. Those who were riding in the stolen machine vanished into the woods bordering on the swamp and have not been apprehended, nor is their identity known.

Mr. Corey's nephew, R. M. Burr, drove the machine to a Newbury street garage for minor repairs. From there it was stolen. The morning the machine was stopped at an all-night lunch-cart in Taunton and then proceeded toward Brockton. From appearances at the scene of the crash it was believed some of its passengers were injured, for pools of blood were seen.

The RED LACQUER CASE

by PATRICIA WENTWORTH

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

A HOME PAPER FOR PEOPLE WHO THINK

BOSTON, TUESDAY, JULY 28, 1925

SECOND SECTION

A Thrilling Novel of Love and Adventure, Mystery and Intrigue That Every-One Will Want to Read

SALLY MEREDITH, nervy niece of M. FREDERICK LASALLE, war gas inventor, is intrusted with the secret of opening the red lacquer case containing the formula sought by spies of rival governments. That night the red lacquer case is stolen and Lasalle mysteriously disappears. The case is so constructed that the formula is destroyed by one not in the secret.

MAJOR BILL ARMITAGE, seven years previously the sweetheart of Sally, appears in search of Lasalle. Unexpected meeting renews acquaintance, but Sally is coy.

DETECTIVE WILLIAMS enter the mystery and takes up the trail of the stolen case.

ETTA SHAW, once friend of Sally, lures the girl to London. She is made a prisoner by Lazare, the Goggled Terror. Lazare attempts to terririze Sally, but fails. Sally's jailers learn from spies that Bill is coming to search Etta's house, the prison. Etta pretends to let Sally escape so that they may recapture her when Bill goes. Bill finds Lasalle.

Read on and enjoy this wonderful story of love and mystery.

CHAPTER XXVI

WHEN Sally turned and ran from Bill's advancing footsteps, panic came on her. She no longer groped her way or tried to run warily; she no longer thought or planned. With a wildly beating heart she fled blindly into the darkness. She did not know that the box hedges on either side had ceased, or feel that her feet were now upon rough grass. She went faster and faster, her pace increased by the downward slope of the ground, until suddenly, with a splash, she was ankle deep in ice-cold water, and the shock of it brought her to a standstill, trembling and panting.

She stood quite still, with the water about her ankles, and listened intently. There was no sound of pursuit. She could see no following light. Very gently she stepped back out of the water and up onto the rising ground that bordered it. She was on the edge of a fair-sized piece of water.

Sally turned to the left and made for the deep shadow there. She must hide, and then presently, perhaps, she could make her way back to the gap and get away by the lane. When she came close to the bushes she moved along, looking for an opening and presently found one. She had to push aside some jutting sprays, and then found, to her surprise, that she was in a narrow pathway which appeared to skirt the lake. It was dreadfully dark, and very wet under foot. The only gleams of light came from the water on her right. Sally began to feel cold and desolate. This was a horrible black maze, and she was hungry, and her feet were wet, and she wanted Bill, oh, most dreadfully she wanted Bill. She came to a standstill where a birch tree rose, airy and slender, from the mass of evergreens, and, flinging her arms about its trunk, she began to cry silently, but with great bitterness.

Sound of a Groan

Meanwhile, Bill Armitage had emerged from Miss Shaw's room and advanced cautiously to the top of the stairs. He was tolerably sure that Sally was not in the house, she must have been found by now unless she had managed to escape into the grounds. The house was deadly still. No footsteps coming and going, no voices. He went cautiously down the stairs as far as the turn, and looked over the balustrade.

He was just going to take another step or two when the sound of a groan struck upon his ears. It seemed to come from the hall. After a moment it was repeated. Bill moved carefully, shifting his position until he could see the foot of the stairs, and there, on the last step, sat a young man with his head in his hands, groaning. From the strong draught which was blowing up the well of the stairs, Bill concluded that the front door must be wide open. It occurred to Bill, however, that, exit by the door being barred, he had better once more make use of the dressingroom window, and he began to go upstairs again, taking two steps at a time.

On the top step he turned his head and saw Etta Shaw standing just where the left-hand passage came out upon the stairhead. Light streamed from an open door a yard or two behind her, and she came forward quickly, almost running, dabbing her eyes with a bright blue handkerchief and sobbing as she came.

She did not see Bill until she almost ran into him, and the second's grace gave him time to get his balance. Even as she recoiled with a little gasp of surprise he said very gravely, "Hush, I want a few words with you," and led the way, with a composure which he was far from feeling, down the other passage and into Miss Harriet's room.

Give the Alarm

As he went he wondered if she would scream and give the alarm,

White Collar Forces Raise Standard of Revolt

3,500 CALL FOR HIGHER WAGES

Municipal Engineers Demand Pay That Matches Dignity of Jobs

New York, July 28 (A.P.).—An important corps in New York's great white collar working army today raised the standard of revolt.

The municipal engineers, 3,500 strong, and representing the largest single aggregation of their profession in the world, outside of military establishments, completed an organization which has for its object improvement of salary and working conditions "comparable with the dignity, training and responsibility of the position."

Although confined in its inception to the engineers, the movement has aroused sympathetic interest among other professions whose members, despite years of study and practical preparation, receive less compensation than the seemingly unlettered immigrant "engineer" of a compressed air drill or of a bricklaid.

WANT 25 P. C. INCREASE

Whether the flag of the engineers will serve as a general rallying point for the long-suffering technical employe is one of the several interesting potentialities of the movement.

Casting aside the restraint of "professional ethics," which has been held to prevent direct, concerted action, the engineers have formed the Association of Engineers of New York, which, at a meeting representing every city department, approved the re-submittal to the city authorities of their demand for a flat increase of 25 per cent. in salary and for amelioration of working conditions which, they assert, have prevented professional employes from reaping the benefits of civil service protection.

The engineers have received offers of moral and material support from members of the profession in other cities and from associations and publications which represent the industry. The conditions under attack are declared to be general throughout the country.

SEEK PUBLIC SUPPORT

At the meeting which was held in the Municipal Building approval was given to a unique but comprehensive plan for soliciting public support. By pamphlet, public addresses and advertisement, the vital part played by the engineer in the daily life of a city resident will be given circulation, with a series of easily-interpreted charts to illustrate his handicap when compared with the per diem laborer employed by the municipality for non-essential work.

Attention also was directed by the engineers' spokesmen to the plight of the city of Chicago as a result of a thirty-minute walkout there of a part of the engineering force.

COOLIDGE SEES NEW ARMS CUT

Believes Completion of European Plan Will Pave Way for Another Parley

Swampscott, July 28 (A.P.).—Consummation of the European security pact, in the opinion of President Coolidge, would lay a broad foundation for further disarmament.

Published reports that the President had given up hope for another armament conference were denied today, although it was pointed out that conditions in Europe are not yet propitious for initiating a definite move for a conference.

It was said there had been no change in the status of the proposal which thus far has been confined to preliminary and rather indefinite suggestions from the administration that it would make an effort to have a conference whenever there appeared to be any likelihood of its going through to a successful termination.

The President believes the Federal Trade Commission has a useful function, it was revealed today, and he is not in sympathy with suggestions that it should be abolished.

It is the President's conviction that while some of the criticism of the trade commission is perhaps justified, it is performing a difficult task as the policeman of business and on the whole is performing a useful service to the public.

NO TEXTILE SLUMP.

While President Coolidge has no late specific information regarding the textile industry, he is convinced there is no general depression and believes conditions are as satisfactory as could be expected during the post-war period.

Mr. Coolidge has been informed that New England producers are confronted with two-fold competition—one, the great amount of coarse goods made in this country and the other importations of fine goods.

Shifting of styles this Fall and Winter, it is the President's belief, will have a marked effect on the woolen industry.

Air Service Gaining, President Believes

Swampscott, July 28 (A.P.)—President Coolidge is confident that the army and navy air services are growing in efficiency and at present are in a satisfactory condition.

Confidential information which has reached the executive has convinced him that the work of developing the air service in both army and navy is proceeding most satisfactorily and there is no cause for alarm that a high state of efficiency is not being reached.

The President regards Major-General Patrick, whose re-appointment as chief of the army air service has been forecast in Washington, as an officer of ability who has rendered conscientious service in developing military aviation.

SEVEN HAPPY AMERICAN GUESTS

3,000 GO ON OUTING TO BEACH

Boston Evening American Guests Make Merry on Nantasket Trip

Once more today the shrill siren of a Nantasket Beach steamboat brought an answering shout of joy from the throats of happy children as the steamboat moved slowly away from her pier at Rowes Wharf and swung her bow toward Nantasket.

On her decks 1,500 mothers and kiddies smiled and grinned and chortled in glee as they began the Mothers and Children's excursion as guests of the Boston Evening American and several business firms that take pleasure in casting sunshine into the hearts and lives of youngsters.

On the pier as the steamer backed away, there was the nucleus of another crowd of 1,500 persons who took the second outing boat and sailed away to sea breezes, health and pleasure an hour after the first joyful boatload.

TOTAL NOW 6,000.

Today's outing party brought the total of delighted mothers and children who have enjoyed the Boston Evening American outings this Summer up to 6,000. This was the second outing. The third will come next Tuesday, when 3,000 more will share in the Nantasket outing thrills and pleasures.

When the boat reached Nantasket today, long before noon, there were milk and cookies for everybody and, sitting on the sand, the smallest kiddies had the time of the lives sucking rich, creamy milk through soda-fountain straws.

EVERYTHING FREE.

The Nantasket Beach Steamboat Company, through the kindness of Manager Fred L. Lane and Assistant Manager James Griffin, provided the boats, the two big Nantasket passenger ships, for the outing throngs. Both of them circulated inconspicuously among the merrymakers to see that everything was shipshape.

The milk was provided by H. P. Hood & Sons, Inc., and the cookies by Loose-Wiles Company, makers of Sunshine Biscuits. Free use of the bathhouse and lockers at the Seaunore Baths was donated by Hal Sarkin, the genial proprietor.

LYNN MAYOR ORDERS CENSUS TAKEN OVER

Declaring that the recent Lynn census was not carefully taken and that he believes the figures are much too low, Mayor McPheters ordered another census taken.

The figures reported by the canvassers in the census taken a few months ago showed Lynn had a population of 97,632. The Mayor says he believes that the real figures will be over 100,000. The work on the new census will start soon.

AUTO REGISTRY REMOVAL IS ASKED

Removal of the Registry of Motor Vehicles from Commonwealth Pier, South Boston, to quarters in the Back Bay is requested in a petition of 6,000 signatures which the Boston Motor Club will present to Governor Alvan T. Fuller at the State House tomorrow morning at 11:30 o'clock.

Secretary Dan S. Hickey of the Boston Motor Club will hand the petition to the Governor.

According to the club officials, the change is desired because motor car drivers find Commonwealth Pier a difficult place to reach.

The Back Bay is accessible to all parts of the city and to suburban points the officials declare, but they suggest no specific peace.

BIG EUROPEAN ARMIES DUE TO 'FEAR OF WAR'

Williamstown, July 28 (A.P.).—Fear is the predominant cause of the great armies of Europe, Sir Frederick Maurice of London said at the Institute of Politics today. France is fearful of the Germany of tomorrow, and the nations created by the peace treaty of Paris are maintaining excessive armies, largely due to their suspicion of Russia.

At his second round table discussion on the limitation of armament, Sir Frederick, who was chief of operations on the British general staff in the World War, said:

"The cause of the present situation in Europe is not the imperialistic or militaristic motive, but 'Funk.' The statesmen are placing security first in their program. Next comes arbitration, and last, limitation of armament.

"France feels that she must have a sufficient force to be able to pounce on Germany if she thinks Germany is preparing for war. The countries carved out of the peace treaties—Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavakia and Finland—and the existing nation, Rumania, are suffering from shell shock. The number of soldiers in proportion to the population is greater than in Germany in 1912."

Noted Artist Dead

Paris, July 28 (AP)—The death is announced of the noted painter, Leon Duguetin L'Hermitte, one of France's foremost landscape artists.

Women Get the "Bargains" in Price Cut

New York, July 28 (A.P.).—The lowest prices in many years were quoted on women's wear fabrics today by the American Woolen Company in opening its lines for the Spring of 1926.

The reduction followed similar price cuts announced yesterday on men's wear lines, based on lower wool, labor and other manufacturing costs. The key number on women's fabrics was priced 17½ cents a yard below that of the last opening.

FARMERS' CO-OPERATIVE GRAIN PROJECT DIES

Chicago, July 28 (A.P.).—The Grain Marketing Company, largest farmer co-operative project ever attempted, meets its official death today. The company will not pay the $4,000,000 put up a year ago by the four companies forming the big grain merger, and which is due today. Sufficient farmers have not put up the $1 per share to make up the sum, and it was understood that less than $500,000 of stock was sold to farmers. The four merging companies have taken back their elevator properties and are operating them independently.

FLATLEY CALLS'EM

Sox Need Help. Hockey and Amateurs. Our Heavyweights. Most Popular Champion.

By NICK FLATLEY

Nick Flatley.

THE Red Sox are home today, and Boston fans should be kind to them. The team failed miserably to show on the road. It was a flop previously at home. The material is not present for big league competition, but President Bob Quinn isn't to blame. He's trying, and no man can do more.

Bob built his team all over last Fall. The new combination isn't the right one. So he's going to work again. He'll get somewhere eventually. He's a baseball man, with no outside interests. He has promised Boston fans that he will keep any star he gets. He will not toss away titles.

When you're inclined to pan, remember that Connie Mack, who collected one of the greatest of all teams, spent eight years in the cellar before his new machine began to go anywhere. Quinn built a real team in St. Louis and will follow suit here.

BOSTON intends to join a new hockey league, which will have New York and Springfield as members. The league will be amateur, controlled by those who have the teams, not by a body that isn't particularly interested in what happens along the seaboard. The trouble with amateur hockey has been lack of authority and discipline.

The new league can succeed if it rules things with a firm and just hand. It will undoubtedly find some better method of giving the boys their prizes than the old lobster box. And it will surely pay the young men, when necessary, and avoid unpleasant and embarrassing court action. Amateurs, these hard boiled times, insist on payment early and often.

THE winner of the scrap at Braves Field Friday evening will be matched immediately with Jim Maloney for another Wigwam ring. That little inducement will make both Jack Sharkey and King Solomon take everything into the ring. Outdoor boxing pays the rewards this summer. The winner of Friday's muss will be able to put more than $10,000 in the old armchair. Figuring the follow-up fight with the so-called Dynamiter.

The two local young men, Jack and Jim, have attracted national attention. They are as good as any of the challengers of bashful Jack Dempsey. A decisive win for either will make the victor a logical candidate for a whirl at the title with all the attendant emoluments.

Neither Jack nor Jim has yet attained the skill necessary to subdue the Dempsey of the Willard and Carpentier days. But either might surprise the famous nose now, if brought in close proximity. Four fights in six years—Dempsey's record—are hardly enough to keep the speed and stamina and judgment up to championship form.

* * *

THE world loves to see a champion beaten. That's why the baseball universe is doing wild dips now about the Pirates and the Athletics, who threaten to knock the title owners out of the ring. The entry—man or team—that carries enough ammunition to dare the heights and scale them, tickles the red blooded fancy. There's one exception that comes to mind.

Whenever Francis Ouimet plays golf, the cheers are his. He is the most popular of all champions. From the day, thirteen years ago, when he startled the world by his famous open victory at Brookline, he has been the favorite of the throngs. Success hasn't touched him. He doesn't tread the path wrapped in the greatness of his glory. He combines a wonderful fighting heart, with a fine and genial personality. Not even the thrilling surge of youth can push him out of the popular heart.

YOUNG MISTER HERSEY of Wellesley, who boldly and confidently fought Ouimet in the State championship, will be a golf king some day. He has the ability, and the courage. He wasn't fazed when he stepped to the first tee with one of the greatest of all golfers. He didn't fold up when he was trailing far in the rear.

He kept shooting ahead, with a determination and brilliance worthy of triumph. He has the proper background. He has a golf course two hops from his home, and he has been swinging clubs since he was knee high to a caddie. Only one champ in a million reaches the pinnacle without traveling the long, tough trail from the bottom.

Stein and Ellis in a Nip and Tuck Battle All the Way Over Course

By BILL GRIMES

Joe Stein of the Nashua Country Club, who had a two-stroke lead at the end of thirty-six holes for the New England Professional Golfers' Organization championship, which is being played over the Sandy Burr course at Wayland, is out battling Alex Ellis today in the third round.

Stein was right at the top of his game yesterday, turning in a 73 card in the morning and a 74 in the afternoon. Joe has been working hard getting ready for the "New England" and is confident that he will again top the field at the close of the tournament this evening.

At the close of the first eighteen holes Joe Stein and Alex Ellis of the United Shoe of Beverly were deadlocked with 73s. They were playing in the same foursome, and it was nip and tuck all of the way. Alex slipped off a couple of strokes in the p. m. round, and the New Hampshire "pro" stepped out in front.

Jack Stait of the Hartford, Ct., Country Club, is sitting pretty in third place, only three strokes back of Joe Stein. Stait, who tied with Willie Ogg in the Massachusetts open a year ago, was one of the favorites for the title before the tournament started, and the field fears him more now than ever. He is a great man on the final eighteen holes, and if he can hold on to his present position he will make things hum today.

Willie Ogg, the defending champion, used up 154 strokes yesterday, and is in a three-way tie with the midgets, Teddy Gow and Don Vinton. They are only seven strokes behind, and, as anything under the sun is liable to develop in a medal play tournament, they are very much in the running. Tom Jones of Fall River, with his 153, will also bear watching, for he is a far better golfer than the enthusiasts in these parts realize.

With his 164, George Aulbach of Arlington appears to be out of the big money. Aulbach was one of the ruling favorites before the boys teed off, but he got into all kinds of trouble during the first 18 holes. The little Arlington pro was out in 39 and looked as though he was going to come in with a 90. But he began to get the bad breaks and used up 47 strokes on the homeward holes. It is doubtful if Aulbach ever slipped as badly as he did yesterday, for he is unusually steady as a general thing. His 74 in the afternoon helped some, but he will have to be down in the early 70s in both rounds today to get any real money out of his two-day work out.

With the exception of Aulbach all the favorites still have a chance, with Jack Stait having the advantage.

Although the weather yesterday was unsuitable for top-notch golf, the competitive record, which was held by Freddie Wright of Belmont, was broken seven times and eight times equalled. The record is now down at 73, and is held jointly by Joe Stein and Alex Ellis. Unless the boys run particularly wild today and get under the 73 mark, Stein and Ellis will have to play off for the medal which the Sandy Burr Country Club offered for the best 18-hole score.

Jim Lally, as clever junior golfer as ever stepped to the tee, will be heard from before the close of the coming tournament.

Bill Grimes

It will be a long time before anyone is able to duplicate the feat of Francis Ouimet of the seventeenth tee in the morning round of the finals against Winnie Hersey, when he drove to within twenty yards of the green. Ouimet is known to be one of the longest hitters in the game, but he never rode one as he did on this occasion.

Jerry O'Leary and Tommie Tucker, a couple of junior members, are cleaning up the weekly tournaments at the Wollaston Golf Club. Tucker's handicap has been cut from 24 to 15 this season.

'WORLD SERIES' GOLF MATCH PLANNED

New York, July 28 (A.P.)—Plans have been laid for a world series of golf between Willie MacFarlane, American open champion, and Jim Barnes, who returned to the United States recently with the coveted British trophy.

This competition was started by Jock Hutchison and Barnes in 1921 and the score stands two victories for the American and two for the British champions as follows:

1921—Jim Barnes (A.) defeated Jock Hutchison (B.).

1922—Gene Sarazen (A.) defeated Walter Hagen (B.).

1923—Arthur Havers (B.) defeated Bobby Jones (A.).

1924—Walter Hagen (B.) defeated Cyril Walker (A.).

Havers is the only full-fledged Britisher to play in defense of his country's open crown in these tests.

MacFarlane and Barnes will clash as soon as the Western open at Youngstown is finished, August 30, and present plans call for the first thirty-six-hole matches to be played in Philadelphia. The second is tentatively scheduled for Washington and the third, if necessary, will be played in New York.

After that the two champions will join forces and meet all comers throughout the country.

Aurora Races Open Today

Aurora, Ill., July 28 (AP)—With trotters and pacers placed under the mono system as the runners, every heat a race and the events at varying distances, Grand Circuit racing for Illinois was inaugurated today with the opening of the first annual Aurora meeting at Exposition Park.

More than 400 trotters and pacers, representing the greatest stables in America, were assembled.

The $25,000 American Derby is for Friday. The free-for-all pace Wednesday will bring together Single Si, Sir Roche, Hal Mahone, Darby Dillon, Frank Worthy, Sparkle Axworthy, Mollie Baron Worthy and Margaret Dillon.

WOMEN PLAY FIRST ROUND AT TEDESCO

Tedesco Country Club, July 28.—Several matches featured the first round of the women's singles which began at the Tedesco Country Club this morning. Miss Polly Palfrey defeated Miss Virginia Wright after three sets, in which Miss Wright displayed fine form in spite of her defeat.

One of the best matches of the morning was between Mrs. R. Griswold and Mrs. Henry Turner. Mrs. Griswold took the first set, 6—1, but lost the second, 7—5. In the final set Mrs. Griswold was forced to the limit before she finally emerged winner of the set, 6—4.

Several of the matches were somewhat delayed by yesterday's rain, the committee hopes to be able to conduct all the matches so that the finals can be played on Saturday.

The men's doubles and women's doubles will continue in the fourth and fifth division if the second round of the women's match is completed.

Dempsey Resumes Gym Training

Los Angeles, July 28 (A.P.)—A pale but hearty Jack Dempsey has resumed gymnasium training here in preparation for his forthcoming return to the prize ring.

There was one conspicuous vacancy in the group which watched, however. Jack Kearns was not anywhere to be seen.

RED SOX OPEN SERIES WITH INDIANS

By NICK FLATLEY.

Lee Fohl brought the delirious Red Sox back to the Fenway today. Lee was hoping as he has been all season that his club would get moving. Lee's naturally an optimist, but the last Western trip has almost changed him over. The athletes had one of the worst excursions in history, winning only four games in twenty played.

Bob Quinn and Lee are praying that the club may reform on this home stand. The boys remain near the home groceries until all the Western clubs and the Mackmen have been entertained. After their harsh treatment in the far parts, the native atmosphere may have a beneficial effect.

A couple of new athletes are with the team, Bischoff, a catcher, and Rothrock, a shortstop. Both will be put through the hoops at the Fenway. The time has come when experiments and nothing else will be in order.

The Sox want to get a ball club together, and will spend the rest of the year working out new material. Most of the young men on hand have failed to meet the major league requirements, and will be in less pleasant spots when another campaign rolls around.

Tris Speakers Indians were the first visitors, hauling in this morning for a four-game sette. Tris hasn't been having any fun with his ball club, either. Things have been going so badly that the fans back home are whispering about a new manager.

Spoke had a team this Spring that looked very promising, to him. He had several new performers and figured that some of the veterans would step merrily into the picture. Tris was wrong, and now, like Lee Fohl, is getting ready to make a new ball club for himself. And that, as Boston rooters know, is one tough job.

GLOUCESTER WAITING FOR YACHT FLEET

By GEORGE W. GRIMM,
Yachting Editor.

Gloucester folks, who all love the yacht sport, are waiting for the arrival at the ancient fishing port of the fleet racing from Hilton Point, Rye, N. Y., for the much-cherished Brooklyn Deep Sea Challenge Cup and numerous other prizes offered by the Cruising Club of America.

George Grimm.

A fleet of twenty-five yachts and three power boats started from New York waters on the Sabbath, from what is known as Scotch Caps, and are expected to arrive at Gloucester some time this morning, after completing their race of 256 nautical miles. In the fleet are fifteen schooners, six yawls and four sloops in the sailing race, while the gasoline-driven class is checked up with three power boats.

The Brooklyn Challenge Cup event needs no introduction to the lovers of yachting, who keenly look forward to the result of the annual event, one of the oldest trophy events in yacht racing. The Nokomis, schooner, owned by Commodore W. A. W. Stewart of the Sewanhaka Yacht Club was the first to get started in the handicap event, getting off at 4 o'clock on Sunday. Following Nokomis came the Mystic in the schooner division, owned by Vice-Commodore Clifford Mallory, Jr., of the Yacht Club, the defender of the trophy.

The other divisions of the race were started at five-minute intervals afterwards.

The yachts starting in the Brooklyn Challenge Cup race, the clubs they represent and their time allowances follow:

Yacht and club	H. M. S.

Braves in Second Tilt With Pirates

Pittsburgh, July 28.—Cooney and Meadows are the pitching selections for the second Braves-Pirate contest. The former has had four days' rest and has shown a good week.

Whatever Bob Smith has on the ball yesterday, it certainly mystified the Bucs, as they got hits only once over six innings and should have gotten away cleanly in the seventh but High could not handle Moore's scratch hit for the third out. That was the turning point of the game.

DEFIANCE WINS BIG STEWARDS' CUP RACE

Goodwood Park, England, July 28 (A.P.)—J. B. Joel's Defiance won the Steward's Cup for 1,000 sovereigns, run here today.

Defiance is by the Tetrarch, out of Bright.

Mr. Joel's Defiance won, Mrs. Arthur James' Sunstone was second and Mrs. J. Bancroft's Purple Shade was third in the twenty-four.

The betting was: Defiance 20 to 1 against, Sunstone 20 to 1 against and Purple Shade 100 to 9 against. Defiance won by three-quarters of a length and half a length separated Sunstone and Purple Shade.

SHARKEY-SOLOMON CLASH SHOULD PACK 'EM IN

GO SHAPES UP AS REAL HUMMER

Both "Heavies" Confident of Victory; Winner Promised Bout With Maloney

By RINGSIDE

Jack Sharkey and King Solomon will pack 'em in at Braves Field Friday evening. The bout, as the boys say, looks like a real row. Both are exceptionally clever and fast for "heavies," the speediest pair that has been seen in these parts since the oldest inhabitant was a boy.

And a match with Jim Maloney has been promised the winner. The climb toward the top of the contender pile is enough incitement for either battler, but the prospective row with Dynamite Jim, means actual money right in the pocket. So Jack and the King will be in there trying, before the echo of the opening bell has died on the evening breeze.

Sharkey is New England champion, but the friends of Maloney think the title is misplaced. Jack claims he was fouled in the last bout, and the referee and the doctors substantiated the claim. But try to make Maloney believe it. Or his crowd.

The Dynamiter's ochorts honestly believe that Mister Sharkey was thumped so viciously in the vicinity of the grocery garage that he just naturally had to fold up. The question will never be settled till the pair meet, and one or the other wins decisively and cleanly.

That row, when it is staged, will draw the biggest house in New England ring history. There's not a bit of doubt about that. So Sharkey naturally will have to put up the fight of his busy young life against Solomon to get his juicy share of the next melon.

Young Mister Solomon has his own ideas in the matter, however. He figures he was robbed in the Maloney bout. He outpointed the South Boston thumper, in addition to taking everything he swung. Maloney's vaunted kayo didn't knock the smile off the Solomon countenance. Jim's iron jaw, incidentally was so badly dented in the seventh round that James was decidedly groggy.

The Solomon party wants a return engagement with Maloney and will extend Mister Sharkey mightily, trying to club his way to the same. The King is a clever two-handed scrapper, who knows all the angles of the game. He will have a lot more trouble evading the Sharkey assault than he did the Maloney surge, but evading is one of the best things he does.

Solomon can take it, and come back for more. He was knocked horizontal twice in the early rounds of his final New York fight, but came back and took the honors. Maloney pasted his every vulnerable spot, but was unable to pry him loose from the soles of his slippers.

The preliminary card has a bunch of good local talent, a muss between George Kid Lee of Worcester, N. E. lightweight champ, and Tony Julian, tough Brighton young man, being the high spot.

Moeskops to Ride at Revere Track

The first and last opportunity of bike fans to see "Pete" Moeskops, world's champion motor-paced rider, will come tomorrow night at the Revere Cycle Track. "Pete" is the last word in the evolution of the cycle game. For [illegible] years he has been the speediest thing on two wheels and [illegible] time bike fans regard him as the Frank Kramer of the present generation of racers.

His opponent will be the popular Bobby Walthour, son of old Bobby, and regarded as the probable winner of America's sprinting title.

"FIGHT OF CENTURY" IS BEING ARRANGED

MR. FRED LANE,
Managing Editor, Sport Dept.
Care of Composing Room.
My Dear Mr. Lane:

[illegible] I am in receipt of your proposal for the organization of the Back Bay A. C.

I should like to have you get right in on the ground floor of this, Mr. Lane. I have six acres of daisies, sparsely interspersed with [illegible] hay. And that is right where the New Battle of the Century is to take place.

You remember how they packed 'em in at Boyle's Thirty Acres. Well, six acres of cash customers [illegible]

[illegible] think the dead-ends would run? We'd have to look [illegible]

FIRST, of course, you would [illegible] And, Fred, you know how big-hearted I am. Well, I am only going to ask for 48 per cent. of the gate for furnishing the site.

Then you could put up the seats, pay the nurses and the overhead [illegible] Little Lord Fauntleroy suits, Bird's wings. I have a [illegible] matters that are bound to come up from time to time. So that brings us down to the main card for the [illegible] in the game today. He has won [illegible] My big idea, Fred, is to bring some of these babies into the ring and let them talk it out to a decision, because we all know how hard it is to get them in there and put up their dukes.

MY boy is none other than Demosthenes Z. Larynx, the well-renowned orator of the Neponset Valley. I [illegible] with Tear Jerk, under Chautauqua rules [illegible] to box to use ear muffs and [illegible]. In Larynx's corner would be [illegible] president of the Nahatan College of Oratory. In Tear Jerk's corner [illegible] the two loud speakers.

My boy Larynx has already been in training, with a box of cough drops as a sparring partner. That is all very well, my dear Mr. Lane, but we have got to get busy and "train up" this "New Battle of the Century."

We will have to pretend that we are peeved at each other and we will have to dash from Hither to Thither without stopping [illegible] and denounce each other Long Island and Jacobsky.

THAT will prepare the Dear Old Public to lay down from $5.50 upward. You can see that six acres of Dear Old Public at $5.50 to $25 will run into money for us, and you know the big-hearted manner in which I have arranged your "cut," don't you, Fred?

I wish you'd think this over, my dear Mr. Lane—this battle I have arranged for ALL 8 Six Acres—and let me know, if you can control yourself, what you think of it.

Yours very truly,
AL.

RUNYON SAYS

New "Gate Crasher" He Asks a Fair Deal The Crafty T. Young He "Crashes" 'Em High One-Eyed Connolly, 2d

By Damon Runyon

IT appears that the business of "gate crashing" at sports events is becoming highly competitive. New rivals of the old established "gate crashers," such as Tammany Young and One-Eyed Connolly, 2d, are entering the field with advanced methods, including advertising.

The writer is in receipt of a sort of a three-sheet letter, laboriously penned on the stationery of the Hotel Mayo of Troy, N. Y., dealing with the merits as a "gate crasher" of one Mr. Pitts Blackman, who seemed to feel that this Damon Runyon column has neglected him, if it has not openly discriminated against him.

I have failed to see mention of myself in your column, writes Mr. Pitts Blackman, and to be truthful with you, Damon, I don't think you are giving me a half-way open break.

I don't know what you hold against me, Damon. I never did knock another person who was there with class, pep, nerve and capabilities. I have traveled all over the world, Mr. Runyon, and have crashed into every big sporting event in the country, and it happens that Champion Jack Dempsey is my personal friend.

Just to show me that you have got a little red sporting blood in your veins, kinda, give my name a little light mention and the same will be highly appreciated by the kid who sits close up at the ringside of every championship fight in the country.

* * *

OF course Mr. Pitts Blackman is in error. The writer has no prejudice against him as an individual. The writer has never excited one "gate crasher" above another. He has always maintained that they should all be treated alike. If one is hung, the others should not be discriminated against.

A "gate crasher" is one who finds means of ingress to a sports event without the formality of settling at the box office. A large number of persons come into this head to be sure, but not all of them care to have undue notice taken of them.

"Gate crashing" as a profession was originated years ago by One-Eyed Connolly, 1st, a character of colorful personality who has long since passed from this earth, and, let us hope, has successfully "crashed" the celestial gates.

The original One-Eyed Connolly made of his "gate crashing" something of an art. He was widely known, and gate-tenders made strong efforts to circumvent the "gate crashing" proclivities of old One-eye, but rarely succeeded. He was an adroit fellow in his calling, and he had the field all to himself.

* * *

AFTER the original One-Eyed came Tammany Young, a protege of the late Paul Armstrong, noted playwright, but before that famous as "Right Cross" of the sports pages of the New York Evening Journal.

Armstrong made an actor of Tammany Young, and Tammany made himself a "gate crasher." Like the original One-Eyed Connolly, Mr. Young developed a certain amount of finesse in his "gate crashing." As the years have gone on, Mr. Young has become more and more artistic.

He does not "crash" gates as Bill Hi picks gates that he hears are regarded as difficult of "crashing." He takes professional pride in his work.

Nor does Tammany Young confine himself to sports events. He has broadened, and elevated "gate crashing." He frequently takes a good running "crash" at first night events, such as an opening of the "Follies," or of Georgie White's "Scandals," for which tall prices are asked for tickets.

With steadily rising ambition, Mr. Young has even "crashed" banquets and social functions. He is socially inclined, and appreciates real good banquets. Also, he likes to demonstrate his artistry in what you might call fast company.

The writer refutes as a base canard the rumor that Mr. Young was once heard asking Mr. Ed Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees for a pass to a ball game. It was probably started by One Eyed Connolly, 2d, to undermine Mr. Young's reputation, and to give rise to the impression that Mr. Young was slipping.

Lowell 'Twi' Nine Makes Local Bow This Evening

By JOE CASHMAN.

Lowell, the latest addition to the "Twi" family, makes its first appearance of the season in Greater Boston this evening, meeting Chelsea at the Walpole street grounds, South End.

There is considerable interest in the latest entry in the race, and, since there are no other league games taking place hereabouts tonight, a large number of the local after-supper fans are expected to avail themselves of the opportunity of giving the visitors the "once over."

The Spindle City nine has split even in its two games to date and is very anxious to win and remain on the right side of the ledger.

Checker has been in a very bad slump of late and the visitors are slight favorites. Manager Janvrin, though, declares that his "Cobblers" have shaken the jinx for all time and are going to finish on the long end of the count. He has his ace, Jim Shea, primed to shoot against the invaders.

Some familiar faces will be seen wearing the Lowell uniform. Jimmy Laston, who played such a bang up game in the backfield on the great Boston College elevens of a few years back, is patrolling right field; Cronin, who caught for Gardner last season, is doing the bulk of the receiving, and Fertics, who twirled for Abbot for a while a year ago, is one of the pit hing mainstays.

Manchester will visit Salem, Dilboy will travel to Nashua, and the Cornets will hike up to Abbot for the other games on the card.

Every club in the league now is very much in the race and there is little to choose between the first and last place nines as far as playing ability is concerned. Close, interesting games promises to be the rule instead of the exception for the rest of the way in.

"DUTCH" AYER OUT AS SOMERVILLE HIGH COACH

The Somerville School Committee has accepted the resignation of Arthur (Dutch) Ayer, as high school athletic coach. Who his successor will be has not been decided.

Ayer was at Somerville High for four years and he was very successful in baseball. The nine won four successive Suburban League titles.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Maker of 51 Golf Champions, "Golf's Most Successful Teacher," Says Chick Evans.

In the first part of the back swing there is very little action, as I have pointed out, and I believe that is the average player can get the knack of delaying his wrists by using an open stance if he will observe the following: Having taken your stance — open — and with wood clubhead resting back of the ball, begin a circling movement of the entire body toward the right. (Remember that all the weight is on the left foot at the start.) The entire body weight shifts over to the right leg, which stiffens. Meantime, the clubhead has slid along the ground, inside the line running straight back from the ball. Well back, the clubhead lifts upward, from the ground of its own accord. Keep on going around now with the body and let the arms swing around and up naturally, the wrists breaking, naturally, at the top. This keeps everything all together—body, arms, wrists and clubhead, as it should be.

Pa, I sed last nite, why doant you play Golf?

You mean Goff, Bobbie, sed Pa. You shud be moar cairful about yure spoken speech, Bobbie, sed Pa.

Never mind wot I mean, I sed, answr my question, why doant you play Golf?

I told you to say Goff, Bobbie, sed Pa.

All rite, Goof, I sed, how do you play Goff, Goof? I sed.

Bobbie, sed Pa, cum Hither.

Not me, I sed, I know what that means, I will re-mane at a distants from you, dear daddy, I sed.

But that dear daddy stuff doant go with my dad, he reeched out his arm like litening & gaffled onto me & put me across his knee awful quick, I haf been there beefore, ya know what that meens.

After Pa got thru spanking me, he sed, now I will tell you why I doant play Goff. I doant play it beekaus my vinium isent so kren like it used to be, sed Pa, wen I was one of the champeen Goffers of the U. S. A., sed Pa.

A Turup & Asia, also, too, sed Ma, you mite as well talk it a good one, sed Ma.

Maybe you better tell Bobbie why I doant care to play Goff, sed Pa. His seems dye-ing to know, sed Pa.

Yure father will not play Goff, Bobbie, sed Ma, beekaus his eyes are not keen enuff to play the galm well, & he is so con-seeted that he wont be in the parade at all unless he can be the caapling & drum major combined, Bobbie, sed Ma.

Is that so? sed Pa, is that so?

Yes I need not broadcast it, sed Ma, I think the peepul on the South Side can heer every word you say, sed Ma.

Never mind about the peepul on the South Side, sed Pa. How dare you say I am con-seeted sed Pa.

Beekaus you are con-seeted, sed Ma.

Who, me? sed Pa. Me?

Yes, you, sed Ma.

That is hard to talk, that hurts, sed Pa.

The trewth is offen hard to talk & it often hurts, deerest, sed Ma.

Never mind that deerest stuff, sed Pa. One minnit you wound me to the hart & the next moment you call me deerest, that doant go with me, sed Pa.

But Ma jest laffed, I guess anything Ma says goes with Pa beekaus it has got to go, that is a pritty good reason, but wen I am married no wife of mine will dast to talk to me.

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes—

Fort Worth, Texas—Here's a classic Texas story, guaranteed true.

The Chicago stockyards were confronted with a dearth of cattle one week in the nineties. The packers gravely alarmed, met to consider what could possibly be done to meet the dire emergency. A Texan, hearing about the meeting and its purpose, strolled in and inquired how many cattle were needed to avert disaster.

"We could get by with 40,000," he was told.

"Wire our ranch and I think they'll ship them for you," he calmly remarked, giving the name of the King Ranch and of R. J. Kleberg, the manager.

Although incredulous, the packers telegraphed asking if by any chance Kleberg could rush through 40,000 cattle.

"Yes. Will you have Shorthorns or Herefords?" came the reply.

* * *

The widow of the Captain Richard King who founded this 1,300,000 acre farm, died only a few weeks ago. This ranch runs 109 miles along the Gulf of Mexico and was bought originally for a few cents an acre. It was developed largely by R. J. Kleberg, its manager. It is now divided into three ranches, with Mr. Kleberg's brother, Caesar, as manager of one and his two sons, R. J., Jr., and Richard M., in charge of the other two, with Mr. Kleberg still active director of the whole enterprise. Many millions have been made by the King ranch.

Van Zandt Jarvis, who, in addition to a full-sized ranch, owns a "small" cow ranch some fifty miles from Fort Worth, where he has 2,500 breeders, told me emphatically that his experience was that there is just as much money in the cattle business today as there ever was before "if you know your business thoroughly and attend thoroughly to your business."

Texas breeds America's principal calf crop. In the Spring enormous numbers of steers and yearlings are shifted to the grazing ranches of Kansas, Nebraska, eastern Colorado and the Dakotas, while in the Fall there is another movement to the feed lots of the corn belt, where they are fattened for the stockyards. There has been tremendous improvement in the quality of the herds in the last dozen years, just as in the corn belt; there has been great improvement in the quality of the pigs raised.

BOND OFFERING NEAR ON NEW WEST POINT HOTEL

West Point will lose a historic landmark as a result of plans which call for razing of the 100-year-old hotel that now stands on the United States Military Academy Reservation in which many distinguished people, including American statesmen from the time of President Jackson, down to the present, President Jackson himself was one of its early guests and Theodore Roosevelt was the last American President to spend a week in the historic building.

The century old building will be replaced by a model hotel on which it was announced contracts have now been started. In connection with this enterprise, it was stated that Freid & Southack & Alwyn Ball, Jr., Inc., of 11 Broadway, New York, a real estate company which only recently went into the banking business, would offer an issue of bonds. Proceeds of these bonds will be used in part to pay for the new edifice which will cost $1,000,000 or thereabouts.

WADASH EARNS LESS FOR PAST HALF-YEAR

BANKERS SPEND $40,000,000 ADVERTISING

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

John W. Prentiss, of Hornblower & Weeks, estimates investment bankers spend $40,000 000 annually in advertising. "I predict that in another ten years' time members of Investment Bankers' Association will be spending $80,000,000 a year and, if they do not, their business is going backward," he declares.

I hear that George H. Burr & Co. will offer a block of New York Merchandise Co., Inc., 7 per cent. first preferred stock at $21 a share within the next few days.

* * *

John Hays Hammond, now occupying his beautiful "castle" Summer home at Gloucester, the situation, like the "White Court" in public interest, will be recalled, among many other achievements, as having acted very successfully as chairman of the Fact-Finding Coal Commission of 1922. He says possibility of a coal strike will inevitably be increased by immoderate buying on part of public. Present anthracite situation, he declares, closely parallels that of 1922. There is much coal in storage and a strike, which in nature of things would probably be of short duration, would have to last several weeks before it would be seriously felt. Railroads are in a better position to handle freight than they were two years ago. He fails to take seriously fears of a bituminous strike in view of three-year wage agreement with union at wartime scales, which still has a year and a half to run.

Nash Motors, in many ways the most spectacular of the automotive shares, made its initial appearance in Boston, and has resulted in enriching numerous investors here. President C. W. Nash is very popular here, and the following from the Boston News Bureau will be read with general interest:

* * *

"President C. W. Nash of Nash Motors Co. is a keen sportsman. Several trophies of his hunting trips adorn the entrance hall of the company's administration building at Kenosha. But he does not limit his memory of use only on his hunting trips, according to a story still told around the little Wisconsin city. He was asked to umpire a baseball game between two department teams. The contest was imp rtant and rivalry intense. Mr. Nash showed up on the field equipped with two revolvers and two bowie knives. Needless to say, there were no disputes of his decisions throughout the game."

* * *

President Samuel A. Salvage of the Viscose Co., largest American producer of rayon, says price of the material will stay at a fairly constant level for a period of years and that production will be greatly increased.

* * *

Office of the treasurer of Harmony Mills will be removed after July 29 to Cohoes, N. Y., where the company's plant is located. The Boston office of the company will be at No. 73 Tremont street.

BUSINESS PROSPECTS CALLED ENCOURAGING

Preliminary reports of Holding Bros. & Co. for the six months ended June 30 show net earnings, before depreciation and Federal taxes, of $943,414. Depreciation charged off during the period amounted to $52,740, leaving net profits of $890,675 before provision for taxes. The company reports that business prospects are very encouraging. There has been an accelerated gain in sales during the year. A $1,750,000 line of last half are expected to exceed the first six months' showing by a good margin.

Seaboard Air Line

Seaboard Air Line June surplus was $179,198 after taxes and fixed charges, but before the contingent bond interest, increase of $36,782 over June, 1924. Six months' surplus was $1,586,009, decrease of $53,536.

DANISH KRONER TO BE "FORCED BACK TO PAR"

Big bank has received private cables from correspondents abroad, stating that National Bank of Denmark has decided to take advantage of the present buying wave in kroner from England and United States to force exchange back to par of .2680 on the present movement, abandoning the former plan to achieve parity by gradual steps over a period of 10 years or more. No official announcement has been made, but the report was strengthened by the sudden rise in kroner at any price which forced the rate to 23.68, up .0135 from Saturday's close.

W. J. Bryan, An Honest Man

His Sincerity Made Him, Unwise Eating Destroyed Him. A Warning for Men Past Fifty.

Copyright, 1925, by Boston Evening American, Inc. Registered by U. S. Patent Office.

Each of us looks from his own point of view at whatever happens.

The Modernist, optimistic about himself, will ask the Fundamentalist to explain why it was that Bryan died, instead of some irreverent Modernist, immediately after the trial.

On the other hand, seeing Bryan stretched out dead on the lawn where the Scopes trial was held, the Fundamentalist, seeing the respectful crowds pass by with reverence, will say, "Bryan's death, immediately after achieving his great victory in the Scopes trial, must be looked upon as a signal proof of Divine favor. The man of good work was taken to his reward at the end of his best day's work."

The average American, keeping his mind free from any theological or other bias, sees in Mr. Bryan's passing from the scene the death of an honest, courageous man, faithful to his convictions, right or wrong, with millions of friends faithful to Mr. Bryan and believing in him to the last hour of his life.

William Jennings Bryan's friends knew WHERE TO FIND HIM. If there was a religious discussion, he was for religion as it appears in the Bible—EVERY WORD AND PERIOD. If there was a question of his belief, he believed EVERY WORD of the message that in his belief God had written, or directly inspired.

Did he believe in the story of Jonah and the Whale? OF COURSE, he did. The Power that created fishes, able to live at the bottom of the ocean, could create a fish in which a man might live for a few days.

Did he believe in the Flood covering the whole earth? He DID believe it. The Power that created enough water to fill the ocean could send down in rain more water sufficient to cover the entire surface of the Earth. If you reminded him that what fell in rain was only water taken from lakes and oceans, nothing added to the Earth's supply, he smiled at you, pitying you.

How could you doubt that a Power able to create enough water to fill the oceans, lakes and rivers could easily create enough additional water for a flood all over the Earth if that were desired?

If anybody quoted to Bryan the Ingersoll question, "Why did not Providence drown the snake before it tempted Eve, instead of waiting to drown the human race," Mr. Bryan condescended no answer at all. He was a believer.

The greatest power in this world is SINCERITY. And that was Bryan's power over the millions that followed him in his lifetime and mourn for him, now that he is dead.

The most difficult of all opponents is the man who works and fights IN DEADLY EARNEST AND IN SINCERITY. Be he right or wrong, a Mohammed, believing that he spoke for Allah; Mrs. Eddy, believing that it was her mission to reveal the true meaning of Christianity; John Huss or Martin Luther, Ignatius Loyola, St. Francis, or William Jennings Bryan, convinced that he had been chosen to uphold the only true belief—it is the SINCERE man that keeps his following and increases it.

Bryan represented ABSOLUTE sincerity. The World is made poorer by his death.

Mr. Bryan died a victim of unwise eating. This writer had warned him against it, in private conversation and in public print. He was told by one friend that the evening meal of a Frenchman past fifty, two ounces of meat, two or three ounces of vegetables, a little fruit and a glass of light red wine diluted with water, would mean longer life than mashed potatoes, thick roast beef, two or three pieces of custard pie, washed down with two or three goblets of ice water, with a large cup or two of hot black coffee.

Light red wine is out of the question in this country. Thirsty Americans can no longer be guided by the diet of General von Moltke, Pope Leo, or the many others that combined very moderate eating with even more moderate use of light red wine, and lived past ninety in strong health.

But at least the heavy eating, that weighs down the body and the mind, could be avoided.

The heavy, colorless, pasty faces and dull eyes that you see around you in this country tell the story of unwise American eating.

THE SMART ALECK

By DR. FRANK CRANE

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY has recently been creating some excitement by discovering and suppressing, or attempting to suppress, a smart aleck.

When a man cannot attain distinction by his merits he tries to stand on his head and click his heels.

There are all sorts of ways of getting notoriety. There are many indecent way, but few decent ones.

The gentleman in question imitates in a general way the works of James Joyce and T. S. Eliot.

The articles, which are called "Sketches From a Madhouse," "proclaim against such cosmic inanities as all faculties, deans, directors, lictors, hangmen; all Philadelphians, both Cabinet and Society; all university preachers, theologians, apostles, prophets, deacons, men of vision; all rules, regulations, totems and taboos, and mumbo jumberies," and so forth.

There are some minds that think they are doubtless of superior intelligence when they learn how to find fault or when they discover faults in anything that is usually respected.

The love of notoriety is a strong liquor and leads people into all sorts of extravagances. There are many criminals who will resort to anything to get into the spotlight and on the first page.

It is easy enough to achieve notoriety. You have been behaving yourself all your life and nobody has paid any attention to you. But if you start out beating your wife and kicking your children around, there will be a hulaboo immediately and you will attract notice.

True fame is the shadow of true stature. False fame is the shadow without the stature.

The authorities of Princeton have suppressed the magazine containing "Sketches From a Madhouse" and what rare copies now exist demand an exorbitant price.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By HELEN ROWLAND

HAST thou a bent button-hook with a beautiful engraved handle?

Hast thou a broken nail-file which will no longer work?

Then, my Daughter, I charge thee cast them not aside in scorn! For, lo!, there IS a place for all such, where they may serve out their old age with honor. Yea, behold, there is the GUEST-ROOM!

Helen Rowland

Hast thou a chair, whereof the legs are weak or a rocker that tippeth forward and lameth the back?

Cherish it, dear heart, and do not discard it; for it still hath a beautiful purpose in life. It shall help to fill the guest-room!

Dost thou possesses a souvenir vase that smiteth the eyes and an hundred bridge prizes that have neither use nor beauty?

Grapple them to thine heart, I adjure thee; for they, too, shall come to thy rescue in thine hour of need. Lo, they shall adorn the guest-room!

Hast thou a collection of unwelcome Christmas presents, whereof thou canst not endure the sight? Then, cleave unto them and despise them not but preserve them for the guest-room!

Hast thou a chiffonier whereof the drawers STICK and cannot be persuaded to open and a dressing-table, whereof the mirror reflecteth the face as a cartoon and a thing of horror?

Hast thou a mattress that is full of lumps, and a bed-spring that sinketh in the centre?

Hast thou a hair-brush lacking many hairs and a picture of "The Lost Sheep," a sampler worked by thy maiden Aunt Hester and a rug that catcheth the foot in passing; a crayon portrait of thy great-uncle and a steel-engraving of Andrew Jackson whereof the frame is chipped?

Gild them with fine gold, I charge thee, and place them in the guest-room, where they may repose in honor and glory.

Alas, how should we exist without the GUEST-ROOM?

For, lo, it is the preserver of old junk and the harbor of all cast-off belongings, the receiver of dead fads and past complexes, the tomb of defunct dreams and antique horrors—the burial place of the undesired!

Behold, the guest-room! Wherein there is naught on which to lie comfortably, nothing on which to sit without danger, no article of use and nothing beautiful at which to look, save "the view from the window"!

Verily, verily, what are the sorrows of a night in prison, beside the torments of a night in the Great American Guest-Room—the graveyard of hospitality?

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

THESE ancient things that man has prized since time itself was young, the crescent moon, the still lagoon, so long, so sweetly sung, ah, how they hold his vagrant thought with their alluring spell, the dawning light, the starstrewn night, the hill crests, loved so well! For all Earth's pageantries must pass, like tides their ebb and flow; pomp's plaudit rings, yet sceptered kings like common men must go. All youth and loviness must wane, all golden locks grow gray, spring's flowing grace must soon give place to Autumn's sombre day. The low may rise, the high may fall, for all is ruled by change, and thus life goes in fleeting shows, forever new and strange. And so to man the ancient things their ancient pleas still make; in heart and mind, sun, stars and wing undying echoes wake.

ALTHOUGH you may be stripped of every dower that seems the common lot of happier men; although you go bereft of place and power and know these gifts shall not return again; although the love that lighted starless hours and touched them to the glory of the dawn, the love which made coarse weeds like rarest flowers be now, with all its wonders, quite withdrawn, you still can go upon your way serenly; content with this one gift that yet remains, the knowledge that you are not armored meanly, but free and proudly pass, unvexed with chains. For you are one with all the high endeavor, with all the deeds to which your pulses thrill, and none can filch your heritage forever, the matchless dower of your lordly will!

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

SEVERAL big promoters are trying to get permission to hold bull-fights in this country and the chances are they'd be successful if it wasn't for the vegetarians.

A BULL-FIGHT is great sport for everybody except the bull.

HE'D much rather have the Toreador shoot craps or play dominoes.

NO tenderloin steak likes to have some guy sticking a fork in him all the time.

ESPECIALLY when he doesn't do it to see if the meat is tender.

THE bull knows he's done, the minute he steps in the ring.

THE S. P. C. A. says that these fights are cruel and they probably are. No bull ever looked like he really enjoyed it.

THERE are lots of pleasanter ways to spend the afternoon.

ONE Toreador nicknamed his bull "Flivver" because he got stuck so often.

THIS fellow was so cheap he put red spectacles on the bull so that he could use white sheets.

HE always stole them from his landlady. One night she caught him taking a couple and did more damage to him than seven bulls.

SHE knocked him senseless and while he was out of his mind he paid her three week's back rent.

WHEN he regained consciousness he tried to sue her for getting money under false pretenses.

AFTER that he always slept in the arena where he was safe.

A TOREADOR'S job is not a dangerous one. The only qualification is that you have to know more than the bull.

A BULL is nothing but a gentleman cow with a temper.

OF course, a lot of bulls don't make good fighters. Some of them are too effeminate.

IT'S nice to be brave, but the timid ones live longer.

STILL, it's better to be a live bull in an arena than a dead one in a butcher shop.

Why Plague White Court With the League Court?

Whenever a United States Senator heads for White Court some of the representatives of the press assigned to the Summer White House immediately jump to the conclusion that the purpose of the Senator in going is to consult with or be consulted by the President concerning ways and means of coercing the Senate to advise and consent to the ratification of the so-called Harding-Hughes protocol, which would add the United States to the membership of the League Court.

When Senator Curtis of Kansas, who succeeded the late Henry Cabot Lodge as the leader of the Senate, accepted the invitation of the President to visit him the other day, dispatches were sent from Swampscott north, east, south and west linking up the visit with the fate of the League Court protocol.

No sooner is it announced that Senator Pepper of Pennsylvania, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Library, and a member of the Committees on Banking and Currency, Foreign Relations, Naval Affairs, Printing, and of the Select Committee on the Revision of the Laws, is to visit the President on August 1, than certain correspondents broadcast from Swampscott the assurance that his arrival will be followed by a "conference" upon the League Court.

Senator Curtis spent several days at White Court, but he denied that he had there discussed the League Court, and he declined to discuss it with the representatives of the press who questioned him in regard to his attitude toward the protocol.

Doubtless neither Senator Lodge's successor in the leadership of the Senate nor his associate on the Foreign Relations Committee is unmindful of the fact that in the discussion of legislation pending before the Senate President Coolidge is not in the habit of ignoring the chairman of the Committee in charge of the legislation in question.

If there is to be a conference at White Court between the President and a representative of the Senate, the reasonable assumption would seem to be that Senator Borah, the Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, will either be in attendance or afforded an opportunity to attend. He has not yet been ousted from the chairmanship of the Senate's great committee.

Just why any such conference should take place at this time the Swampscott advertisers of the League Court have thus far failed to tell the public. Yet they must be well aware that the Harding-Hughes protocol is not at the White House. They have many times published the fact that the protocol is pending before the Senate and that the Senate has agreed to take up the protocol for debate on December 17 next.

President Wilson, it is true, tried to coerce the Senate into ratifying the League of Nations covenant, and failed.

His successor in the White House, President Harding, in a speech delivered at St. Louis in June, 1923, publicly disclaimed any intention of attempting to coerce the Senate into ratifying the League Court protocol.

His successor in the White House, President Coolidge, has to date preferred the example of Mr. Harding to that of Mr. Wilson in so far as the relations between the President and the Senate are concerned.

In the absence, therefore, of any official announcement that the President has decided to reverse the traditional American policy of recognizing the Senate as the body clothed by the Constitution with the final control of foreign policy, and therefore the partner of the President in the making of treaties, why do the representatives of those newspapers which were defeated in their attempt to drive the United States into the League of Nations continue to thrust the League Court into every Senatorial conference that takes place at White Court?

If any attempt is there organizing to intimidate the Senate into abdicating its Constitutional responsibility in regard to the League protocol, certainly the American public are entitled to be told about it. But in the absence of any evidence of anything remotely resembling such an attempt, why do certain Swampscott correspondents begin and end their dispatches several times a week with speculation concerning the particular train upon which the League Court protocol is to be brought to White Court by this or that Senator?

As a matter of fact, the fate of the League Court protocol will be settled on the floor of the Senate at Washington, and not upon the front porch of the Summer White House at White Court.

Furthermore, the fate of the League Court will be determined by Public Sentiment operating in the open and not by partisan consultations held in secret.

For "PUBLIC SENTIMENT is everything," said Abraham Lincoln. "With PUBLIC SENTIMENT nothing can fail, without it nothing can succeed."

Good Enough for England

A Little Too Good for Us

The National Grange, representing a million farmers, adopted a resolution demanding the creating of super-power plants to furnish electric power and light to rural communities at cost.

A good resolution, but it won't produce the power. In England the government is proceeding with experiments to get from the tide in the Severn enough power to supply London and the next seven biggest cities with light and power.

Over here, we don't like the idea of letting the people's government do anything for ITSELF. This government isn't supposed to be sufficiently intelligent or honest for that. And then also, of course, the good Lord did not create water power for the PEOPLE. He had Wall Street and stocks and bonds and dividends in mind when He created Niagara. Any safe and sane conservative will tell you that.
